40 Thousand To March at President's Inauguration

Parade Will Be Seven Miles Long And Will Take 2½ Hours to Pass

About 40,000 persons will participate in the parade at President Truman's Inauguration January 20, according to the estimate of Inaugural Committee officials, who yesterday released a general order covering the march.

The parade is expected to be 7 miles long, and will run about 2½ hours.

Of the estimated 40,000 participants, 12,000 will be cadets from the Nation's four service schools—Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Merchant Marine Academies. The entire Virginia Military Institute Cadet Corps will parade, as will 1000 Washington high school cadets and 1000 representatives of veterans' organizations.

Parade Order Approved

The parade order has been approved by General Omar N. Bradley as grand marshal. There also will be about 40 floats and 40 bands.

The parade will get under way at 1 p. m. at the "initial point," at the intersection of New Jersey and Independence aves.

Preceding the first of eight "divisions" in the order of march will be Metropolitan Police, the grand marshal's section, the United States Army Band, the President's section and the United States Marine Corps Band, in that order.

A platoon of motorcycle police will spearhead the parade. Following in a sedar will be Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett, Melvin D. Hildreth, general chairman of the Inaugural Committee, and Carter T. Barron, chairman of the parade and special events committee of the inaugural.

Massed Colors of States

Accompanying General Bradley will be Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, and Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Chief of Staff, United States Air Force.

A platoon of the Third Infantry Regiment will form the escort for the President's section, followed by national, presidential and vice presidential colors with guards.

President Truman and Vice President Barkley will be next in order.

The massed colors of the 48 States, the District of Columbia and United States possessions will follow in the President's section. Next will come individual Cabinet

Baby Born Alive 4 Minutes After Death of Mother

Abingdon, Va., Jan. 10 (AP).—An emergency Caesarean operation on a dead woman with a physician's pocketknife brought a live baby into the world at George Ben Johnson Hospital here, hospital authorities revealed today.

The child's mother, Mrs. Elmer Widner, Dentons Valley, had been dead about four minutes when Dr. Harry Hayter performed the operation in a ward of the hospital, authorities said.

According to Dr. Lee M. Cole, jr., resident physician, the woman entered the hospital Friday for a circulatory and kidney disorder, complicated by pregnancy. She died about 4 p. m. Saturday.

Discovering a "very feeble heartbeat," Dr. Hayter thought there might be a chance of saving the baby. He sent for operating instruments but, fearing delay, decided to perform the Caesarean section immediately with his pocketknife.

The child, a 4-pound 4-ounce boy, was blue when delivered, but, according to Dr. Hayter, is now "doing nicely" at the hospital.

Snow Falls In Palm Springs; Midwest Braces For More Cold

One Nebraska Town Has Been Without Rail Service 8 Days

By The Associated Press

The Midwest, already covered with snow, ice and sleet, braced for a dangerous freezing rain late today.

Frigid weather gripped the citrus country of Southern California for the second time in a week. Icy winds whipped snow into its winter playgrounds. The South, meanwhile, was having a heat wave, with temperatures running up into the 80s in several cities.

In western Nebraska, a new snowstorm was piling an expected 4 to 6-inch fall on highways still clogged by the remains of last week's blizzard.

At Kansas City the weather Bureau forecast 48 hours of freezing rain followed by "the most serious ice glaze condition in many years" for Oklahoma, Missouri, and Kansas.

Power service was disrupted in most of southwest Missouri.

3 Inches at Palm Springs

In Southern California, where a low of 18 degrees was predicted for tonight, citrus, vegetable and flower growers ignited smoke pots in an effort to warm the chill air.

The Weather Bureau reported the first snowfall on record in San Diego. Palm Springs, popular winter resort, had 3 inches.

San Bernardino, in California's orange belt, had its first snowstorm since 1933. Las Vegas, Nev., got a 3-inch fall, the first since 1939.

In the San Bernardino Mountains, another 24 inches of snow pushed the snowstand to 44 inches at Big Bear Lake.

Southern Oregon caught some of its coldest temperatures in years.

Town Isolated Eight Days

A state of emergency was declared in tiny, snowbound Gordon, Nebr. No trains have reached the town of 2000 for eight days and drifts block all roads. Dangerous shortages of baby food, canned milk and fuel oil were reported.

In Utah, rescue parties fought drift-block roads to reach 20 hunters stranded at Hansel Valley, 45 miles west of Tremonton.

The cold wave in the upper plains and northern Rockies abated only slightly after West Yellowstone, Mont., had successive nights of 42 and 37 below zero.

Three Indicted Here in GWU Bribe Case

New York Jury Also Returns Counts In 'Fix' Attempt

Indictments charging attempts to bribe David Shapiro, cocaptain of the George Washington University basketball team, were returned yesterday by grand juries here and in New York.

While the defendants were ordered to stand trial in New York only on the charge of offering Shapiro $1000 to "fix" the George Washington-Manhattan game January 4 in Madison Square Garden, the District grand jury indicted three of the four men on three counts.

Allegedly Met In Hotel

The four arraigned in New York last week were Joseph Aronowitz, 35, and Philip Klein, 24, both of Brooklyn; Jack Levy, 40, Miami, Fla., and William Rivlin, 43, New York. Rivlin was not named in the District indictments. All are free on $20,000 bond in New York.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay said the action here against the three men was prompted by the accusation that they met Shapiro twice during December at the Roger Smith Hotel, 18th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., where they are alleged to have tried to get him to either "throw" or "fix" scores of games against North Carolina State College, University of Virginia, and 21 other games on the Colonials' schedule after December 5.

First Under New Law

Fay said he read newspaper accounts of the alleged bribing and decided to seek indictments, the first here under a law enacted July 11, 1947, following the Frank Filchock-Merle Hapes pro football scandal in New York. The law deals with corrupt influence in athletics and carries a penalty of one to five years imprisonment and a fine up to $10,000 on each of the three counts.

It was brought out by Fay that the District action was independent of the New York case.

Assistant District Attorney Alfred J. Scotti of New York said yesterday that Levy, Aronowitz and Klein would face the charges in Washington after their cases are settled in New York. Scotti presented the evidence to the New York grand jury, which concluded its investigation yesterday morning.

Senate District Group Called By McGrath to Organize Today

By Edward F. Ry
Post Reporter

The Senate District Committee, with 2 holdover members and 11 new ones, will hold its organization meeting at 11:30 a. m. today.

The session was called by Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) after the Senate Republican conference approved the following six-member minority line-up in the District group:

Senators Joseph R. McCarthy (Wis.), John J. Williams (Del.), Andrew F. Schoeppel (Kans.), Margaret Chase Smith (Me.), Robert C. Hendrickson (N. J.) and Karl E. Mundt (S. Dak.).

McCarthy and Williams are both starting their third year in the Senate, but neither has served previously on the District Committee. The other four are freshman Senators.

On the Democratic side, Chairman McGrath and Senator Olin D. Johnston (S. C.) had been on the committee. Five freshman Democrats were added: Senators J. Allen Frear, jr. (Del.), Lester C. Hunt (Wyo.), Estes Kefauver (Tenn.), Matthew M. Neely (W. Va.) and Bert H. Miller (Idaho).

Meanwhile, Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) suggested on the Senate floor that members of the minority party be allowed to serve on three, instead of the present two, standing committees so that the District group could retain a share of experienced members.

He made the comment after strongly praising, in an informal interview, the new Republican line-up of the District group.

Cain served on the District Committee for two years and headed the subcommittee in charge of District tax legislation. He gave up his District membership in order to retain his place on two major committees.

On the floor, Senator Cain cited the fact that no Republican who had previously served on the Senate District Committee will be serving on it this year.

Truman OKs One-Package Labor Bill

House Democrats Plan Single Measure To End Taft-Hartley Law, Enact New One

By the United Press

House Labor Committee members said yesterday, after a White House conference, that President Truman is agreeable to a "single package" bill repealing the Taft-Hartley law and enacting new labor legislation.

Representative John Lesinski (D., Mich), who will be the next chairman of the committee, and two members, Representatives Augustine B. Kelley (D., Pa.) and John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.), discussed labor legislation with the President.

Lesinski favors a "single package" bill but Senator Elbert D. Thomas, (D., Utah), who will head the Senate Labor Committee, already has introduced legislation to repeal the Taft-Hartley law and reenact the old Wagner Labor Relations Act.

Truman Wants Changes

This presumably would clear the way for consideration of several amendments requested by Mr. Truman. The President wants restrictions on jurisdictional strikes and some type of secondary boycotts. He also has urged a study of ways to curb strikes endangering the public health and safety.

Lesinski said after the White House meeting that Mr. Truman did not wish to dictate to Congress the method it should use in passing new labor legislation. But he said the President was agreeable to the "single package" bill if it suited Congress, and took the same attitude toward continuing the National Labor Relations Board as a separate Government agency.

Speaker Sam Rayburn disclosed meanwhile that there will be 16 Democrats to 9 Republicans on the Labor Committee. There were 15 Republicans to 10 Democrats during the last Congress.

Republican Views

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) told the Senate that labor took the wrong attitude when it asked Congress to repeal the Taft-Hartley law and reenact the Wagner Act without change.

Calling for a bipartisan approach to labor legislation, he said he favors amendments to give both employers and labor "the same procedural rights."

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), coauthor of the law, said Congress would reaffirm Taft-Hartley provisions if they are considered on their merits.

Early Action Pledged

A record $103,321,427 District budget for the fiscal year starting July 1 was sent to the Capitol yesterday.

It was "balanced" by renewed hope that Congress will quickly pass a 2 per cent general retail sales tax. It was "balanced," too, by carefully excluding the effects of a pay raise for District employes.

Promise of quick action on the sales tax came at once from the bipartisan two-man team expected to have a leading role in steering District tax legislation through the House—Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) and Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.).

Passed House Last Year

Smith is slated to head the House subcommittee in charge of District tax legislation. Bates headed the group last year and is slated to continue as ranking minority member.

Their backing of the sales tax last year helped it to House passage, but it was blocked in the Senate by opposition headed by Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.). He will fight the sales tax again this year, he said, and will urge that new revenue needs be met by a 25 million dollar Federal contribution to the District, more than double the present 12-million-dollar annual Federal grant.

Promises by House District leaders of early sales tax action boom the chances for final passage. Several members suggested that if the House last year had acted earlier on the sales tax, it could have probably cleared the Senate. As it was, the sales tax bill got to the Senate late enough for delaying objections to block it.

Can't Anticipate Raise

As to why the budget leaves out the cost of a pay raise which congressional leaders of both parties have said District employes will get, District officials explained that they can write into the spending picture only expenses authorized by present law. The pay raise for District employes is not yet on the law books.

If the pay raise should be retroactive to last July 1, when Federal employes got theirs, it would add some 10 million dollars to the budget total. If not retroactive, the increase would be about 5.3 million.

Representative Bates said he believed the sales tax, promptly enacted, combined with authority for short-term District borrowing could be made to cover not only the budget as now written but the extra expense of a retroactive pay raise.

The Commissioners' plan envi-

Air Power Advocates Ready To Fight for 70-Group Force

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Air power advocates on Capitol Hill mapped plans last night for a fight to restore funds for a 70-group air force—sharply cut back under President Truman's defense budget.

The $14,218,000,000 proposed for the national military establishment in the next fiscal year is a record for peacetime, but falls way short of maintaining the armed forces voted by Congress just seven months ago.

Under it all three services will have more money — but less strength—than provided for the current year. Manpower will be established at 1,616,000 — about the present level—instead of expanding to 1,950,000 officers and men by next June 30.

Ten Army divisions will be maintained instead of the 12 originally contemplated. Navy ships will have smaller crews and only one new ship will be laid down next year—a minesweeper. Little protest was heard at the Capitol on this score, however.

Air-minded Congressmen, on the other hand, criticized the reduction in the number of active Air Force groups to 48 and the failure to provide all the plane procurement money necessary to build up to a modern 70-group Air Force by 1952.

President Truman anticipated Congressional protests. In a separate statement, he declared that the number of groups is a "misleading" yardstick of air strength. The 9200 USAF operating planes to be maintained in 48 groups—a cut of 1100 aircraft—is a truer comparison, he said, adding that it largely involves trainers and Army support craft.

Mr. Truman's message stressed the importance of maintaining "balanced" land, sea and air forces, and keeping our military program in line with our economic and financial resources.

Actually, the Truman budget carries additional sums for defense outside the national military es-

'Hill' Follows Party Lines in Budget Views

A party line division quickly formed yesterday in congressional reaction to the highest budget figure ever proposed in peacetime.

Disagreement centered on the expanded domestic programs figuring in President Truman's $41,858,000,00 spending request for the fiscal year beginning next July 1.

Republicans called the amount reckless and dangerous, but there was recognition of the necessity of heavy expenditures for holding back Russia. Senator Wherry of Nebraska, Republican floor leader, said the record size of such "necessary expenses" wasn't properly considered in proposing new spending on other programs "which will grow even greater in future years."

But Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) said he is "particularly glad to see funds budgeted for public aid to education, health, expanded social security and a real housing program." And he praised Mr. Truman for a "splendid job" in holding the budget to a figure $1,678,000,000 above this year's costs, in spite of "many increased demands."

The head of the House Appropriations Committee, Representative Cannon (D., Mo.), said the budget is "the most practical that could be presented at this time." He said there will be benefits for

Surplus Also Sought

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday handed Congress a record $41,857,777,869 peacetime budget, dominated by outlays to avert or prepare for another war.

More than half of the total (21 billion dollars) was earmarked for national defense and international cold war expenditures. An unspecified additional amount will be asked later to carry out Atlantic pact decisions now in the making and to arm still unnamed "free nations."

Funds for this as yet unenacted "Fair Deal" program, together with a grand total of $5,960,000,000 in new taxes in the next fiscal year, were asked of the new Congress.

Mr. Truman repeated his request for four billion dollars in corporate and income taxes to wipe out the 873-million-dollar deficit left by his budget and to build a surplus for debt retirement and North Atlantic contingencies "in the present uncertain period."

On top of this, he asked Congress to start the long-delayed increase in Social Security payroll taxes (one half of one per cent each on employes and employers) on July 1, 1949, to raise another $1,700,000,000 for old-age insurance benefits.

Another (one-quarter of one per cent) payroll tax increase will be asked to raise 260 million dollars to finance his proposed compulsory health insurance program.

Synopsis of Message

Here is a synopsis of the President's message:

The United States must continue to exert strong, positive effort to achieve peace in the world and growing prosperity at home. In a period of high prosperity it is not sound public policy to operate at a deficit. A Government surplus at this time is vitally important.

Necessary increases in our national defense program bringing total defense outlays to 14.3 billion dollars will result in a 21 per cent increase over 1949. This will provide the most powerful forces we have ever maintained in peace. But essential economic and social programs should no longer be delayed. For housing and slum clearance, expanded social security and the national health program, 500 million dollars is included.

Another 290 million dollars is asked for Federal aid to education.

Aid for Europe

For international affairs and finance, 6.7 billion dollars is requested, compared with 7.2 billion in 1949, most of it for economic aid to Europe. Our investment in European recovery will repay us many times in terms of increased strength and improved organization for peace.

But economic strength is not enough to assure continued independence to free peoples. We are discussing with western European countries measures to increase the security of the North Atlantic area. Congress later will be asked for funds to provide military supplies to these countries and certain others important to our national security. It is not possible at this time to estimate the amount.

Two other Government commitments have a major impact on the budget—interest on the public debt and services and benefits for veterans and their dependents. Together these total 11 billion dollars, or 26 per cent of the budget.

Others Total 10 Billion

Exclusive of the four big items—international, defense, veterans and debt interest—all other Government activities total 10 billion dollars, or 24 per cent of the whole.

Of these, social welfare, health and security programs will cost 2.4 billion dollars, nearly half of which goes to the States in public assistance grants.

Natural resource programs, including atomic energy, will cost $1.9 billion, and farm programs, $1.7 billion. Transportation and communication facilities, many of them supporting our national de-

Britain Plans No U. N. Protest On Shooting Down of Planes

Jews Say Troops Are Now Out of Egyptian Territory

Tel Aviv, Israel, Jan. 10 (AP).—A Jewish military spokesman said today there now are no Israeli troops within Egyptian territory.

Israeli units which occupied several strategic heights approximately 2 miles inside the Egyptian border near the Rafa-el 'Auja crossroad have been withdrawn, the informant said. The withdrawal was completed last night, he added.

Earlier a source close to the government said Israel will accuse Britain before the United Nations of violating the truce in Palestine. The cabinet decided yesterday to send instructions to Aubrey Eban, its U.N. representative, to lodge such a charge, the informant said.

The protest will refer to Britain's air reconnaissance in the southern Negev desert area near the Egyptian-Palestine frontier and to the sending of British troops to Aqaba, Trans-Jordan's port on the Red Sea.

It also will accuse Britain of making large-scale arms shipments to the Egyptians, the informant said. He added that no U. N. observers are stationed at Egyptian airfields and probably there are no observers in the ports.

The U. N. has ordered an embargo on the shipment of arms to the Middle East.

(In New York the British delegation to the U. N. said no war material has been delivered by Britain to any Arab government since the beginning of the Palestine truce.)

Cyril Marriott, British Consul at Haifa, denied newspaper reports that he had advised Britons to evacuate Israel.

Israel to Accuse British of Violating Palestine Truce

London, Jan. 10 (AP).—Britain will continue massing military forces within easy reach of Israel, but will make no protest to the United Nations concerning the shooting down of five RAF planes by the Israelis, British diplomats said tonight.

A Jewish informant in Tel Aviv said Israel plans to accuse Britain before the U. N. of violating the Palestine truce. Israeli authorities also will charge that Britain has made large-scale arms shipments to the Egyptians, the source said.

There were signs that both United States and United Nations officials were working to cool off the British-Israeli dispute before it complicated further the general Palestine problem.

Key British cabinet members and defense chiefs met today on the crisis arising from the shooting down of the RAF planes near the Egyptian-Palestine border last Friday.

Prime Minister Attlee called the session.

The diplomatic informants said the whole problem of the security of Britain's interests and installations in the Middle East was carefully reviewed. Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin gave the ministers a detailed account of the situation and outlined the steps he is planning to take.

The British were said to feel they already have taken effective warning action against the Israelis by sending troops to Aqaba, a strategic Red Sea port on the Trans-Jordan side of the Palestine

Early Consideration Promised

GOP Needles Administration To Act Against Filibusters

Senate Administration leaders under GOP needling yesterday promised early consideration of a change in Senate rules to curb filibusters on major legislation.

Vice President-Elect Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) made the pledge in a Senate floor skirmish with Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), author of one of many antifilibuster bills.

Later, the Senate GOP Policy Committee called on Democratic leaders to make the cloture rule change the first order of business, as Republicans had pledged they would do.

"Unless it is taken up at this time, I don't see how the President can hope to enact any part of his civil rights program," Republican Policy Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) told newsmen.

Barkley, continuing as Democratic floor leader until his inauguration as Vice President January 20, told the Senate he has already asked Rules Chairman Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) to bring in the rules change "as soon as possible."

Barkley said he could give no guarantee it will be the first thing up, but believed Hayden will give it "promptest consideration."

Hayden, meanwhile, joined with Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Neb.) in sponsoring a resolution to refurbish the Senate's present cloture (debate limit) rule to make it more effective.

The present rule provides that two-thirds of the Senate can cut off debate on "any pending measure" after a cloture petition is filed by any 16 Senators.

There is more than one gimmick that makes the rule ineffective. Last session it became less than useless when the chair ruled a motion to call up a bill is not a "pending measure." Southern opponents blocked antipoll tax and other civil rights measures by simply filibustering the motion to call them up.

The change proposed by Hayden and Wherry, like one approved last session by the Senate Rules Committee, makes the rule apply to anything before the Senate, whether a "measure, motion, or

High Court Denies Foremen's Appeal

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday upheld, in effect, the Taft-Hartley Act provision that employers do not have to bargain collectively with their supervisory employes.

In a test case, the Foreman's Association of America argued that this section of the act unconstitutionally deprives supervisors of their rights and asked the Supreme Court to reverse a lower court decision enforcing it. The high court refused to hear the appeal.

The Supreme Court, without issuing any usual decision day written opinions, in other orders:

1. Refused to interfere with the trial of 12 top Communist Party leaders, scheduled to begin Monday in New York.

Charged with advocating violent overthrow of the Government, the accused said the grand jury which indicted them represented only "rich" and "propertied" persons, and they also demanded that the trial judge and trial jury panel be disqualified.

2. Dismissed an appeal challenging constitutionality of Tennessee's "right to work" law.

The AFL Teamsters' Union, which brought the appeal, without comment asked its withdrawal. Last Monday the high court upheld similar Arizona, Nebraska and North Carolina bans on the closed shop or other union membership requirements for employment.

In the supervisors' case, the Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Co. was ordered by the National Labor Relations Board on January 30, 1946, under the Wagner Act, to "cease and desist from discouraging membership" in the foremen's union.

The Taft-Hartley Act, enacted in June, 1947, said that while supervisors could continue to join or remain in labor unions, employers would not have to bargain with them.

The Budd company then went back to the courts, and the U. S. District Court in Cincinnati nullified the earlier NLRB order. In the present appeal Budd's and the Solicitor General said Congress was within its rights in excluding the supervisors from compulsory collective bargaining procedures under the Taft-Hartley Act.

The union unsuccessfully argued that the provision is unconstitutional because it places supervisors "beyond the only machinery, both national and local, available for the peaceful settlement of industrial disputes . . ."

In the Communist case, Attorney Charles H. Houston of Washington was one of six lawyers who told the high court that the Federal pury system in the Southern District of New York deliberately excludes "the unemployed, the economically depressed, manual workers, persons who work by the hour, Negroes and members of other racial and national minorities, and members of minor political parties."

To select juries, they said, the courts there specifically employ such listings as the telephone directory, the Social Register, Who's Who in New York, college alumni lists and similar directories. Thus they held both the indictment and trial juries unfair.

Furthermore, they charged that Judge Harold R. Medina, assigned as trial judge, had demonstrated prejudice during a preliminary action.

While the Supreme Court made no comment in refusing the appeal, filed only Friday, the court last year upheld New York State's "blue ribbon" jury system by a 5-to-4 vote.

The 12 who face trial, members of the Communist Party's National Committee, are William Z. Foster, Eugene Dennis, John B. Williamson, Jacob Stachel, Robert G. Thompson, Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., Henry Winston, John Gates, Irving Potash, Gilbert Green, Carl Winter and Gus Hall.

In another action, the Supreme Court yesterday refused to interfere with a California Supreme Court ruling that California's "hot cargo" or secondary boycott law is unconstitutional.

The high court agreed to review the court-martial conviction of an American private, Frederick W. Wade, serving a 20year sentence at Leavenworth, Kans., on a charge of raping a German woman while overseas. Wade, on trial twice, after the first trial was not concluded, argues he was placed in double jeopardy.

High Court to Recess For Inaugural Rites

In accord with its tradition, the Supreme Court will meet an hour earlier, at 11 a. m., on Inauguration Day, and after admitting new members to the bar will declare a recess.

The justices will attend the ceremonies in a body on January 20, wearing their judicial robes, when Chief Justice Vinson administers the oath of office to President Truman.

Loan Program

Bill to Spur Production Is Offered

By The Associated Press

A sweeping proposal for Government financing of private industry to maintain high economic levels was contained in a bill given yesterday to Congress.

It would be financed by a 15-billion-dollar fund, to be administered by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to bolster lagging industry and maintain levels of production called for in President Truman's economic report.

As a far-reaching alternative to private industrial borrowing, Federal loans could be made to States or regional agencies so they could set up and operate their own industrial enterprises.

In this respect, the bill was one response to Mr. Truman's suggestion in his State of the Union message that the Government might go into the steel business if private industry failed to meet the demand.

The proposal, entitled "The Full Employment Act of 1950," was presented simultaneously in the Senate and House by Representative Patman (D., Tex.) and Senators Murray (D., Mont.) and Sparkman (D., Ala.).

In its full aspects, the bill would put Government into the business field in the biggest way since the vast public works program of the depression days of the 1930's.

There was little doubt it would meet opposition from the Republicans, who already have cried "socialism" over the program Mr. Truman submitted to the new Democratic-controlled Eighty-first Congress.

The bill's sponsors, in an accompanying statement, declared their proposal "is not a public works project, nor is it intended for emergency use." They said the bill "would give the President an operating arm with which to put into effect such of the long-range plans of the National Council of Economic Advisers as meet with his approval," they said.

Such a measure is "absolutely essential" to stabilize the national economy at high levels, and meet "ominous signs of weakening in some lines of business activity," they declared.

The sponsors said that it was "conceivable" the bill's provisions would apply to steel, but emphasized it was not a "steel bill."

It eliminates another favorite filibustering device, amendments to the Senate journal, by giving the cloture motion precedence over other "privileged" questions.

Morse, Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.), and at least one member of the Democratic leadership, Senate Whip Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.), want to go further and cut off debate by a simple majority vote.

It was a speech by Morse, chiding Democrats for not acting on his majority vote cloture rule that brought Barkley to his feet yesterday.

Later Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) joined in the needling. Knowland stressed that a change in the rules to block filibusters had to be taken up at the start of a session to be effective. The Californian also addressed a letter to Hayden asking him to put the change ahead of everything else in the Rules Committee.

Barkley told the Senate he has always fought filibusters but that neither major party has a "clean record" on that score.

"I have always felt that the filibuster was an anachronism, that it had no place in a legislative body," said the Vice President-elect.

Again, he agreed "wholeheartedly" with Knowland "that the rules of the Senate ought to be amended, if it is necessary to amend them, in order that this body may transact business."

"It is the only legislative body in the world where a single individuals can interfere with the orderly procedure . . . to a point where the Senate can never vote on something on which it might have an overwhelming majority in its favor."

Taft later told reporters that "all we (Republicans) can do is press them (Democratic leaders)."

"If they are in good faith about putting civil rights legislation through Congress, this is the first step," Taft added. "There is no reason they shouldn't act at once." The resolution to change the rules is itself subject to filibuster. Some Southern opponents of civil rights legislation are talking compromise in the form of constitutional amendments barring poll taxes and lynching, but Dixie members will probably fight the rules change in a body.

Twenty-Six Injured in Wreck Of Orange Blossom Special

DINER OVERTURNED—Ten cars of the Seaboard Air Line's crack Orange Blossom Special were derailed yesterday at Milford, Va. The all-Pullman train was north-bound with returning winter vacationists. At least 26 persons were injured

Milford, Va., Jan. 10 (Spl.).—Ten rear cars of the Florida-to-New York Orange Blossom Special jumped the rails at 60 miles an hour here today, injuring 26 persons, among them Bandleader Paul Whiteman and his wife.

Many of the injured were attendants in the dining car which lurched sharply, then balanced at a precarious angle, spilling scalding coffee and water on waiters and cooks.

Twenty-six persons were rushed for treatment to Mary Washington Hospital, 21 miles north of here in Fredericksburg. Five of 12 admitted at the hospital were from Greater Washington. Three of the 12 were reported seriously hurt.

A defective truck on the baggage car just behind the engine was believed responsible

Three persons hospitalized were listed last night in serious condition:

Vanderbilt Isoms, dining car employe of Jersey City, burns on legs lacerated hands, face and scalp injuries.

Charles W. Simms, chief cook, 814 9th st. nw., Washington, second-degree burns on both legs and back, lacerations of both legs.

Chester A. Jennings, crew member, 4529 41st ave., Brentwood, Md., second-degree burns of upper part of body, lacerations of right arm, possible internal injuries.

Also admitted, but not listed as serious, were the following from the Washington area:

Jonah Hardy, dining room attendant, 1916 6th st. nw., head injury, third-degree burns of upper part of body and arms.

Matthew Spires, crew member, 32 Quincy pl. nw., injuries of ears, fingers and shoulders.

John H. Williams, 901 N. Wayne st., Arlington, leg and back injuries, to be released.

Treated and released was R. F. Stubbs, crew member, 810 9th st. ne., leg injury.

The only passenger admitted to the hospital was Mrs. Clarence J. O'Brien of Bala-Cynwyd, Pa., who suffered back injuries.

Whiteman, jazz king turned disc jockey, was treated for a left wrist sprain.

Mrs. Whiteman suffered injuries to the right forearm, hand and ankle and required several stitches.

The Whitemans, after treatment, hired a cab to continue on to Washington to visit friends, hospital attendants said.

House Control Is Tightened By Democrats

By The Associated Press

Administration Democrats in the House yesterday moved to take a firm grip on control of major House committees, just as Senate Democrats already have done.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) said the Democrats would take larger majorities on important committees than did the Republicans when they were in control in the Eightieth Congress.

House committees on which the Democrats decided to boost their control are Agriculture, Appropriations, Labor, Executive Ezpenditures, House Administration, Judiciary, Merchant Marine and Fisheries, and Veterans' Affairs.

The House already has decided not to change the ratio of membership on the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Meanwhile, Senate Democratic leaders yesterday rejected a Republican proposal to increase the size of eight major committees to 15 members.

Senator Taft (Ohio), GOP policy leader, made the proposal in a resolution calling for a change in the Senate rules. Taft was acting on instructions of the Republican conference, which wants another Republican seat on major committees.

All of the 15 Senate standing committees are now limited by the Congressional Reorganization Act to 13 members each. On major committees, the Democrats have established an new ratio—taking eight seats and giving the GOP five.

Combined Jewish Congregations Sued by Market

A meat market here filed suit for $25,000 yesterday against the Combined Congregations of Washington, Inc., which is said to represent orthodox and conservative Jews here.

The District Court suit, brought by Marinoff & Pritt, 3602 Georgia ave. nw., charges that the congregations are unlawfully interfering with their meat business and had distributed libelous literature.

It is charged that Jewish leaders tried to get the meat market management to sign a restrictive agreement as to the sale of meat as kosher. After the management refused, it is said, the congregations distributed handbills advising Jews that Marinoff & Pritt were no longer under "supervision," according to the suit.

The defendants are charged with "arrogating to themselves" powers which are unauthorized by Jewish religious law.

Court Dismisses Taxi Rape Charge

A rape charge was dismissed yesterday in District Court against Amiel G. Turner, 33, a cab driver of 818 O st. nw.

Turner had been charged with assaulting a 36-year-old divorcee in his taxi in Rock Creek Park.

Prince Georges 'Dimes' Drive Starts Thursday

The March of Dimes campaign in Prince Georges County will get under way Thursday and run to January 31, Eugene B. Plumer, drive chairman, announced yesterday.

Plumer, who is chief of Mount Rainier police, said that no specific goal had been set for the campaign. Last year the drive netted a total of $14,248.

Maryland Bill to Ask Bridge Of $2,420,000 for Patuxent

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Jan. 10.—Construction of a two-million-dollar bridge over the Patuxent River, connecting Charles and Calvert Counties, will be asked in a bill to be introduced in the State Senate here next week.

The proposed bridge would cut by five miles the distance between Washington and Calvert County, and eliminate the present bottleneck to beaches in that area, Senator Louis L. Goldstein (D., Calvert County) said tonight in announcing that five southern Maryland Senators will sponsor the bill.

Approximately 150,000 vacationers travel each summer into the area to be served by the bridge, he said, adding that residents of Calvert and Charles will be able to avoid an 86-mile trip to cross the river—only one in Maryland without a bridge.

A report of the Maryland State Roads Commission was read to a session of the Senate tonight. The roads agency reported the bridge will cost $2,420,000, and that annual maintenance and operating costs would be $65,000.

The bridge would not be self-sustaining, the roads body said, since anticipated tolls would amount to only $52,500 as against annual operating costs of $65,000.

Senator Goldstein challenged the figures of the Roads Commission, and said the survey was made in December when the traffic count is smallest. It does not take into account the vacationers who swarm into the "unpolluted waters" of Southern Maryland each summer nor the tobacco market traffic, he said. It also fails to take into account the number of persons who would be attracted to the new route as a shorter road to the Morgantown bridge from Baltimore and Annapolis, he declared.

This bridge could have been built in 1939 for $750,000, Senator Goldstein declared, "but the shortsightedness of the State Roads Commission at that time was the reason it was not built. We have enough votes in the Senate to pass this bill and we believe we can pass it through the House.

Conditions in Maryland's mental institutions were attacked by Senator Daniel Ellison (R., 4th Baltimore).

Bills for Referendum On Constitution Filed

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 10 (AP).—Administration bills calling for a referendum on a convention to alter the State constitution or adopt a new one were introduced in both branches of the Legislature tonight.

Ford Division to Lay Off 1200

Detroit, Jan. 10 (AP).—A revision of daily production schedules that will mean layoffs effective tomorrow for approximately 1200 workers was announced today by Ford's Lincoln-Mercury division.

Benson Ford, general manager of the Lincoln-Mercury division, said that while daily output will be cut back by about 10 per cent, the 1949 total is expected to equal or surpass the 1948 production.

He explained this by saying the division was able to work only 10 months during 1948, but is scheduling a full 12 months output for the present year.

"Our allotment of critical materials for 1949 is about the same as last year," Ford said, "but we have to spread it over a 12 months period."

China Reds Smash At Nationalists

Nanking, Jan. 10 (AP).—Chinese Communist troops today were crushing with smashing attacks a government island of resistance north of Nanking which is delaying the Red push to the Yangtze.

(The Communist radio said remnants of the Nationalist force—which is estimated at 130,000 men the day before—was "completely wiped out.")

Pilots returning from the front described the fighting as the "heaviest we have seen any time in China."

These forces of Gen. Tu Li-ming numbered possibly 250,000 when they defended the former base of Suchow. Steady attrition has caused them heavy losses since encirclement.

Government planes were requested from the ground to make no more supply drops because the remnants are so tightly compressed, reports reaching Nanking said.

The capture of Tu's forces, with their great stores of munitions and modern equipment, will make powerful Red forces available for the expected drive to the Yangtze, the last barrier before Nanking.

(Heavy fighting at Tientsin, with the government throwing warplanes into the battle, was reported from Peiping by Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa. Government headquarters at Peiping said the Reds were using all available strength and moving up reinforcements.

(Except for a clash Monday, the situation around Peiping continued quiet. Moosa strongly indicated in a previous dispatch that a proclamation halting hostilities may come by next Sunday.)

[The United Press reported from Nanking that Communist troops had breached the inner defenses of Tientsin and telephoned reports from the beleaguered city of two million that it was likely to fall "at any time."

[Seventy Americans in Tientsin — most of them businessmen who refused evacuation—were ordered to move into the Leopold building, the city's largest structure, which houses the American consulate. There they were awaiting what appeared to be inevitable capture by the Red forces, the dispatch related.

[Red troop swarmed across the dike protecting Tientsin and captured North Station, the United Press said. So sure were the Communists of early success that they refused to see a four-man city council truce mission which sought a cease-fire, according to the dispatch.]

President Chiang Kai-shek's luxurious private plane was moved to a small field inside Nanking within a few hundred yards of Chiang's official residence.

Hirohito Told Leadership Is His Duty

Tokyo, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur told Emperor Hirohito today that his duty was to lead the Japanese people to a democratic way of life, informed Japanese sources said.

Informants said MacArthur, in a surprise meeting which lasted more than two hours, stressed that Hirohito should not abdicate to show that he considered himself responsible for the Pacific war.

As on their previous six meetings, Hirohito went to MacArthur.

It was reported that the Supreme Allied Commander summoned Hirohito because of persistent rumors that the Emperor planned to give up his thrown to show he shared war guilt with Hideki Tojo and six other Japanese warlords hanged for their roles in Japan's attempt to rule the world.

MacArthur did most of the talking, informants said. He told Hirohito that Japan must become self-supporting as soon as possible, and that he should call upon the nation for all-out efforts to achieve this aim, it was reported.

The Emperor, Japanese sources said, thanked MacArthur for American aid, particularly in the way of credits and materials, and he said the Japanese people were grateful for food from the United States.

Bill Proposed For Admission Of More DPs

By The Associated Press

Two Democratic Senators yesterday proposed legislation to ease the road into the United States for 400,00 Europeans who were driven from their homes by the war.

The measure—by Senators McGrath (R. R.) and Neely (W. Va.)—would rewrite the so-called "displaced persons" law passed by the Republican Eightieth Congress and condemned by President Truman as discriminatory.

Under the McGrath-Neely proposal, persons who entered the American ocupation zones in Europe before April 21, 1947, would be eligible for admission.

The Republican-sponsored law provided for the admission of 200,000 persons but barred any who made their way into the American zones after December 22, 1945.

During the presidential campaign, President Truman charged this discriminated against certain Jews and Catholics who fled from Poland and other countries in 1946 and 1947.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican presidential nominee, sought to have the date changed in the special session of Congress. But former Senator Revercomb (R., W. Va.), defeated by Neely, turned a deaf ear to Dewey's plea.

McGrath and Neely also proposed repeal of provisions, (1) requiring displaced persons to have jobs waiting for them, (2) making it necessary that 30 per cent of visas be issued to agricultural workers and, (3) requiring that admissions be charged against future immigration quotas of the countries involved.

Mme. Sun Yat-sen Plans to Stay in Exile

Shanghai, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Mme. Sun Yat-sen, widow of the founder of the Chinese Republic, said today she had no intention of emerging from her self-imposed political exile.

Reports that she might assume any responsibility in current political maneuvering to bring about peace are "completely unfounded," she said.

Small States Of Indonesia Discuss Stand

Batavia, Java, Jan. 10 (AP).—Leaders of individual Indonesian states outside the conquered areas of Java and Sumatra gathered today to discuss their role in the Dutch plan for a United States of Indonesia.

The meeting is expected to crystalize their attitude toward the Dutch attack which uprooted President Soekarno's Indonesian Republican administration in Java and Sumatra. Former Republican areas are not represented at the meeting.

A dispatch from Jogjakarta, the former Republican capital, said gunfire still crackles intermittently in the outskirts of that city. The Republican underground radio reported clashes between Dutch troops and Indonesian guerillas elsewhere in Java.

President Soekarno and three of his cabinet members including Premier Mohamed Hatta still are prisoners of the Dutch on the island of Bangka, off Sumatra.

Baby Sitter Convicted . . .

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

"I LOVE BABIES"—Miss Harriet Fitzgerald, 58, 1825 F st. nw., was sentenced to pay a $25 fine or spend 10 days in jail on a simple assault charge in the beating of six-month-old Kathleen Morton. Miss Fitzgerald denied striking the child and declared, "I love babies." Kathleen is the daughter of Marine M/Sergt. D. J. Morton and Mrs. Morton of 4136 Arkansas ave. nw.

Baby Sitter Fined $25 for Beating Child

Miss Harriet Fitzgerald, 58-year-old professional baby-sitter, was fined $25 here yesterday for beating a 6½-month-old infant.

Sentence was imposed by Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court who commented:

"It seems there are too many baby-sitters around town who don't know how to take care of babies."

The child, flaxen-haired Kathleen Morton, was undressed in the courtroom and her buttocks shown. At times the child whimpered as her mother, Mrs. Teresa Morton, 4136 Arkansas ave. nw., told the court how she left the baby Friday morning for the first time in its life. Mrs. Morton said she returned three hours later from a downtown appointment to find the baby sobbing, directions given the baby sitter disregarded, and Miss Fitzgerald complaining about "nosey" neighbors.

Mrs. Morton said that a few minutes later as she was about to give Kathleen her bath she noticed the child's buttocks were "black and blue." And then, she said, neighbors reported having heard screams, as from a beating, during her absence.

The mother immediately summoned her husband, Marine M/Sergt. Donald J. Morton.

Miss Fitzgerald, who resides at 1825 F st. nw., denied any wrongdoing.

"I patted the baby at one time to soothe it. Sometimes, a baby gets gas and if you pat its back it helps," said Miss Fitzgerald.

A white-haired spinster, Miss Fitzgerald said she took care of relatives' children for 15 years. Her record, read by Judge George D. Neilson, shows seven arrests for drunkenness. The judge said she has served time in jail, paid fines and forfeited collateral. The probation office had found her a bad risk for probation.

U. S. Seeking To Assure Truce Talks

The State Department tried yesterday to prevent the recent shooting down of British planes from upsetting the coming truce negotiations between Israel and Egypt.

A statement read by Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said the department had "received information" from both Great Britain and Egypt about the action of Israeli forces in downing five British planes along the Israel-Egypt border. Three British airman were reported killed.

"We have every confidence that it will be regarded as a regrettable incident only, and that it will not interfere with the truce negotiations which are to take place in Rhodes later this wek," the statement said.

Yesterday's statement added that the State Department "has been given to understand that if there are any Israeli forces still in Egypt, they are in the process of being withdrawn."

U. N. Cautions Israel, Britain

Lake Success, N. Y., Jan. 10 (U.P.). The United Nations intervened in the tense dispute between Britain and Israel tonight to protect the coming U. N. armistice negotiations for Palestine, but Israel's U. N. delegate complained that the British were jeopardizing the talks by their "provocative maneuvers."

Israel U. N. Representative Aubrey S. Eban, said Britain was guilty of repudiating the U. N. truce in Palestine and thereby was prejudicing the projected Israeli-Egyptian armistice talks.

Eban condemned what he called Britain's "maneuvers" in the Holy Land area. He presumably referred to the British movement of troops to Aqaba, in southern Trans-Jordan, and the British naval demonstration undertaken yesterday in the Mediterranean.

Eban issued his statement shortly after it became known that U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie has asked both Israel and the British to soft-pedal the dispute growing out of the shooting down of five British warplanes Friday by Jewish forces.

U. N. officials also disclosed that Lie had "been in communication" with United States officials on the "gravity of the situation."

British Plan No Protest

border. British naval units have concentrated at Malta.

"The presence of our troops in Aqaba will be a red light for the Jews not to go any further than they have done," one diplomatic official said.

Twice Israeli officials have refused to accept a British protest against the downing of the planes because it was addressed to "Jewish authorities in Tel Aviv."

The diplomatic informants here said the British representative in Haifa since has readdressed the protest to "the provisional government of Israel"—the way the Jews wanted it addressed.

They stressed, however, that this does not imply any change in Britain's policy of not formally recognizing the Israeli government.

British and American exchanges on what to do next about Palestine continued both here and in Washington. The American Minister in London, Julius C. Holmes, conferred with Foreign Office chiefs.

One American informant said a British suggestion that arms be supplied to the Arab countries did not meet with United States sympathy. The U. N. has clamped an arms embargo on the Middle East.

British officials said privately that if the U. N. Security Council fails to hold the Israelis to their own territory, Britain will feel free to make "alternative" arrangements.

This could mean that the British government would give precedence to its treaties with Egypt, Trans-Jordan and Iraq over its obligations to the United Nations.

Under those treaties Britain normally supplies arms—and men, too, in the event of emergencies—to its Arab partners.

Fugitives Tell Of Red Bases

Munich, Germany, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Crew members of the escape-plane which brought a load of refugees here from Hungary last week, said today several Soviet air bases are being established in western Hungary.

Laszlo Nagy, a refugee, said Soviet officers have requisitioned several blocks of houses in Budapest. He said entire streets had been evacuated in Huvosvolgy, the fashionable villa district, to house Soviet staff officers whose activities are a "most strictly guarded secret."

One Way to Keep Warm

Downey, Calif., Jan. 10 (U.P.).—A 9-year-old boy said today he set fire to a $40,000 milling plant to keep warm.

Cardinal's Arrest 'Last Resort'

Vatican City, Jan. 10 (AP).—The Vatican radio charged today Hungary arrested Josef Cardinal Mindszenty only after giving up the idea of arranging his "accidental death."

The Communist-dominated Hungarian government, the broadcast said, had orders from Moscow to "liquidate" the Roman Catholic primate before the last day of 1948.

"Embarrassed by these summary orders," the radio said, the government created a commission to study means of obeying. This group considered sending the Cardinal abroad, arranging his "accidental" death, or arresting him, it continued.

"It not being possible to induce the Cardinal to go abroad, and the second solution being found difficult to put in practice, the third solution was decided on."

Cardinal Mindszenty was arrested December 26 on charges of treason and espionage.

Budapest dispatches meanwhile indicated the Hungarian government has rejected the Vatican demand that Mindszenty be released as a condition to negotiations for settlement of differences between the church and state.

Rome, Italy, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—The news agency ARI, usually well-informed on Vatican affairs, said today the Hungarian government had asked four Hungarian bishops to resign, but that they refused to obey pending further orders from the Vatican.

Nationalists Again Active, Clay Warns

Berlin, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay reported today that extreme nationalist groups "again are beginning to lift their heads" in Germany.

He said Otto Strasser's "infamous" Black Front, and a group called the National Democratic Party, already have been organized, and are demanding that Germany receive back its eastern territory ceded to Poland. The National Democratic Party also demands the return by France of Alsace-Lorraine, Clay said.

"Although these groups are as yet small, Democratic German leaders recall with uneasiness that until 1928 National Socialism itself was a negligible movement," Clay said in his monthly report to Washington.

He stated that Strasser's followers were reviving his Black Front under the "seemingly innocuous name" of the "League for German Revival."

Strasser first formed his Black Front in 1930, after he was expelled from the Nazi Party because of leftist leanings. He went into exile in 1933, and his brother, a high Nazi, was murdered in Hitler's purge of June, 1934.

Strasser was reported planning to return to Germany in March, Clay said. He now lives in Bridgeton, Nova Scotia.

The National Democratic Party, Clay said, demands the "reestablishment of the German Reich within its former boundaries.

As Workers Jeer

British Start Dismantling Ruhr Plant

Bochum, Germany, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Guarded by British troops and German police, 11 workers braved taunts of "traitor" from fellow Germans and began today to dismantle the Bochum Steel Works, Germany's third largest.

One third of the plant is to be torn down under the Allied program, but work has been held up for a week by the refusal of the 11,000 Bochum workers, aided by a sympathetic management, to join in the dismantling.

The Bochum police force of 1200 men, and British troops at nearby barracks, were alerted for possible trouble.

After the delay in which tension mounted and representatives of the workers even appealed to President Truman, the British claimed a first-round victory. They declared 120 more men will be imported from Brunswick tomorrow to speed up the job.

Twenty-one Bochum wreckers were assigned to the task today, but only two showed up. They were joined by nine workers brought from Essen.

No Hope Held For Collecting Huge Red Debt

Berlin, Jan. 10 (AP).—Russia owes the western Allies more than 10 million dollars worth of eastern German goods, but there is no hope of collecting the debt in Soviet-blockaded western Berlin, Maj. Gen. George P. Hays said tonight.

The deputy American military governor explained that all attempts to sidestep the Berlin blockade by landborne imports from eastern Germany had proved fruitless. Negotiations with the Russians collapsed in September and have not been resumed.

Hays said the western Allies proposed last summer that "reciprocal deliveries" from Russian-occupied Germany, under the Potsdam reparations agreement, be made to western Berlin. This would have brought in more than 10 million dollars worth of such necessities as coal, grain, fuel oil and timber to the western sectors of the city. Western Berlin now is being supplied by the American-British airlift from western Germany.

Russia's obligations for "reciprocal deliveries" was written into the Potsdam pact in 1945. Under its terms 15 per cent of all industrial capital equipment removed from western Germany was to go to the Soviet Union in return for an equivalent value in commodities to the western powers from Russian-controlled stocks.

United States claims alone against the Rusians amount to approximately four million dollars. British and French claims are even higher. No reparations have been delivered to Soviet authorities from western Germany since the Berlin blockade went into effect last June.

Strasser Plans to Quit Nova Scotia for Home

Bridgetown, Nova Scotia, Jan. 10 (AP).—Dr. Otto Strasser said today he has applied for a passport to return to Germany to lead a "rally of German democratic forces." He was commenting on a Berlin statement by Gen. Lucius D. Clay.

Strasser has been living on a farm here for five years. "I lead no party," he declared. "You might describe our movement as a rally of German democratic people similar to that headed in France by General de Gaulle. We have room for members of all parties.

Plane Drops Vaccine To Priest Bitten by Dog

Winnipeg, Jan. 10 (AP).—A Royal Canadian Air Force plane today successfully completed a mercy flight to the Arctic outpost of Igloolik and dropped medical supplies to an ailing Roman Catholic priest.

Air force officials here said the aircraft reported vaccine and other medical supplies had been dropped by parachute to Father Ostran, 26-year-old priest who was bitten by a mad dog Friday.

Czech Police Hold 2 GIs, Army Reports

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 10 (AP).—Two American soldiers have been prisoners of Czechoslovak police for more than a month, the United States Army disclosed tonight.

Efforts are being made to have the men released, it was learned unofficially.

Army officials identified the GIs as:

Recruit Clarence R. Hill, 31, of Jackson, Miss., and Recruit George R. Jones, 22, Owensboro, Ky.

Both, the Army said, are members of the First Battalion of the 6th Armored Cavalry Regiment of the United States constabulary.

An Army statement said the GIs went "absent without leave" from their posts December 1, 1948.

Twelve days later, the Army said, German border police at Furth Im Wald, on the Czechoslovakia and U. S. Zone, were called by a Czech border police sergeant who reported that Czech police were detaining the two enlisted men at Domazlice, Czechslovakia, as they assertedly crossed the border by walking along railroad tracks on December 10.

Conflicting with this story, however, was another report which the Army received from German border police December 14. The Germans were informed by Czech police at Kubitz that the Americans "were being detained in the office of the director of public safety in Pilsen," after having been arrested while visiting hotels in Czechslovakia "accompanied by German girls."

Step Nearer Marriage . . .

The Washington Post

APPLY FOR LICENSE—The oft-beset romance of a Fort Belvoir soldier, R. E. Reynolds, 26, and his Italian fiance, Gioia Culley, 19, moved a step nearer marriage yesterday when they applied for license at Municipal Court. She arrived here Saturday after months of delay. They plan to be married here in five days

Gen. Taylor To Head Staff In Europe

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, 48-year-old retiring head of the United States Military Academy at West Point, has been appointed chief of staff for American forces in Europe.

Taylor, who succeeds Maj. Gen. Carter Magruder, will serve under Lieut. Gen. Ralph Huebner. He will leave for Heidelberg on January 28.

The announcement was made by Taylor, himself, at a luncheon given in his honor today by Thomas J. Watson, president of Intednational Business Machines Corp. Guests included Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, president of Columbia University, who praised Taylor's selection.

Taylor, who became superintendent of the academy in 1945, will be succeeded by Maj. Gen. Bryant E. Moore, chief of the Army public information division in Washington.

Driver Cleared In Fatal Crash

Walter S. Ridenour, 39, of Baltimore was acquitted yesterday of manslaughter and reckless driving charges growing out of a traffic fatality near Laurel last Thursday.

Fatally injured when his truck was in collision with Ridenour's car was Lawrence E. Bay, 55, also of Baltimore. Bay died shortly after the accident in Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale.

Ridenour was cleared of the charges by Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie. Prince George County police testified Bay's truck turned suddenly into the path of Ridenour's car.

Italian Girl And Sergeant Seek License

Sergt. Robert E. Reynolds, 26, applied for license here yesterday to wed his 19-year-old Italian movie actress sweetheart, Miss Gioia Culley.

The Fort Belvoir sergeant expressed the hope that the turbulent four-year romance would soon calm down.

"I'm just about as exhausted as my pocketbook," said Reynolds.

It cost him $1200 to get his fiancee into this country. Unravelling the red tape around immigrants has taken a vast amount of time. And for months, it all looked hopeless, he said.

The sergeant was in the victorious American forces at Rome in 1945 when he met Gioia, who had been in movies there. He soon began seeing her regularly and they decided to marry.

But Reynolds was returned to this country and although Gioia claims her father is an American, she could not get the necessary papers for entry.

Meanwhile, as the official papers were cleared, Reynolds started to raise the money for the $500 bond required of immigrant war brides and more for the fare. He got the bond, only to have to withdraw the money when his mother became ill. Finally, others paid for the bond, and Gioia came over.

The couple must wait five days before marrying under the law here. But the exact date is not set because Reynolds wants to have helpful friends present at the ceremony.

Like many others, Reynolds is now trying to find a suitable home. Then, after the marriage, he is going to his mother's home in Chillicothe, Ohio, for a 10-day "honeymoon" furlough.

Smoother Path Indicated for Foreign Policy

By The Associated Press

The Nation's bipartisan foreign policy appeared headed for smoother sailing yesterday after a brief but angry squall in the Senate.

Two developments pointed in that direction:

1. President Truman discussed the international situation with John Foster Dulles, Republican foreign policy expert, in a 30-minute talk at the White House.

2. Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) was reported urging his GOP colleagues not to make an all-out fight against the President's nomination of Dean Acheson as Secretary of State.

Bipartisan cooperation appeared to be in danger last week when the Democrats, cashing in on their election victory, took over control of the new Congress. Senate Democrats promptly allotted themselves an 8-to-5 margin in make-up of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Republicans protested, saying when they were in power they took only seven seats and gave the six to the Democrats.

Some Republicans saw a chance of getting back by attacking Acheson's nomination to the No. 1 diplomatic post. But Vandenberg was described by associates yesterday as advising moderation. The Michigan Senator, they said, feels that Acheson is almost certain to be confirmed and that little would be gained by challenging him at the outset of an extremely difficult job.

Taft Predicts Delay

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) predicted that GOP Senators will put off any decision on a possible organized fight against Acheson for the time being.

He said it was not discussed at yesterday's GOP policy committee meeting, but may be taken up after the Foreign Relations Committee acts on the nomination.

Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) scheduled a meeting of the Foreign Relations Committee for today to consider the nomination.

Meanwhile, the American Federation of Labor threw its support behind Acheson. AFL President William Green declared in a statement:

"We are impressed by Mr. Acheson's broad understanding of the basic international problems of our time and we are convinced that his views on maintaining a firm policy against Soviet aggression and aggrandizement coincide with our own."

"Leftist" Ideas Cited

Some Republicans had been prepared to challenge what they called Acheson's "leftist" ideas, but Acheson's friends said there is no doubt he stands for a firm policy toward Moscow. They cited his past, as Undersecretary of State, in helping to draft the Truman doctrine.

Dulles' call on Mr. Truman at the White House was interpreted in diplomatic circles as pointing toward a continuance of bipartisanship.

Dulles, who was Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's chief adviser on foreign affairs before the November 2 election, has been acting head of the American delegation to the United Nations during Secretary of State Marshall's absence because of ill health.

[The United Press quoted Dulles as saying Acheson has "good experience" for the State Department post, and "has shown the capacity for carrying on our foreign policy without disruption and vacillation which would be disastrous at this juncture."—Editor's note.]

Truman Tells Congress He Will Ask Funds To Send Military Supplies to Nations Abroad

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

President Truman put the new Congress on notice yesterday that he would ask for funds to send military supplies to foreign countries.

This was his first official intimation that the Marshall Plan for economic recovery would be paralleled soon by a plan to build up the armed strength of free nations abroad.

He did not specify how much the military aid would cost; the budget made no allowance for it, and the message to Congress said the omission merely emphasized the need of added revenue from new taxes in the coming year.

Countries Not Mentioned

Nor did the President say what countries would get military help. He said they would include those Western European countries which have been discussing an Atlantic defense treaty, and "certain other countries where the provision of such assistance is important to our national security."

This was understood to mean, firstly, other European countries which might not become direct partners in an Atlantic treaty, and secondly, Latin American republics whose defenses had a direct bearing on American preparedness.

In general, however, the budget message pictured the new Administration's program as a "transition to peace" rather than as a preparation for war. It produced no surprises in the field of foreign policy, but it outlined a program vaster in scope, though half a billion dollars smaller in estimated cost, than in the budget submitted to Congress a year ago.

The total spending now proposed for international programs was $6,709,000,000.

ERP Biggest Item

For the biggest single item, the second full year of the European Recovery Program, the President budgeted $4,300,000,000, and also a supplementary amount of $1,250,000,000 for the three months of the present fiscal year from April 1 to June 30.

The $4,300,000,000 figure represented a reduction of about 19 per cent from what was sought for European recovery for the first year. It thereby carried out one of the basic pledges given to Congress last spring; that the program should show a year-to-year decline in American assistance over the four-year period.

The President's message reported "substantial progress" toward economic recovery and political stability in western Europe, but said "the momentum must be maintained if the European economy is to become independent of extraordinary outside assistance by the target date of July, 1952."

Target Date Reaffirmed

The President thus reaffirmed this "target date" in spite of growing indications, notably in the latest report from the participating nations' organization in Paris, that some countries might need further American help beyond 1952.

The $4,300,000,000 estimate indicated that the Administration is planning to cut about 107 million dollars from the European countries' request for fiscal 1949-50 even before the appropriations committees of Congress get busy with their pruning knives.

Individual requests from European countries totaled more than $4,600,000,000; these estimates were then combined, screened and cut by the 19-nation European organization at Paris to $4,347,000,000. The final figure from Paris did not include an estimated 60 million needed for administrative expenses and, under the terms of existing legislation, for making strategic materials available to the United States.

The President asked for the repeal of one portion of the existing Economic Cooperation Act whereby three billion dollars of 1948-49 expenditures for European recovery were charged against the 1948 budget surplus. This was a device produced by Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) in an effort to make the European Recovery Program more palatable to the Republicans.

Called 'Bookkeeping Shift'

The President branded it as a "wholly artificial bookkeeping shift," and said it gave a "distorted picture" of the budget surplus or deficit in these two years.

A few other changes in the existing ECA legislation may be sought when the committee hearings begin, but they are likely to be minor.

The message also asked for liberalization of the present law admitting displaced persons to the United States. The President estimated that the International Refugee Organization program of feeding, housing and resettling displaced persons could be ended by June 30, 1950.

The Budget contained no estimate of how much might be sought for aid to China. It simply estimated that a round figure of 600 million dollars might be needed to cover aid to China, Greece, Turkey and Korea in the new fiscal year.

This was taken to mean that uncertainties were too great, in Greece as well as in China, to make possible any precise estimate now.

State Department expenditures were budgeted at $281,700,000, approximately the same amount as last year. The chief increase was an additional $4,500,000 sought for the overseas information and educational exchange program, bringing the total for these activities to 36 million dollars.

To make up for this increase, and for a requested pay increase for foreign service employes, the budget provided a 10-million-dollar decrease in the foreign building program of the department.

Italian Police Besieged by Rioting Mobs

Bari, Italy, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Two columns of police armored cars left Bari today for Andria, 30 miles northwest of here, where rioting mobs of unemployed blockaded police in their barracks and besieged nearby landowners in their villas.

Fragmentary reports from Andria said a number of police and demonstrators have been injured, but no further details were immediately available.

In Bari, 30 police and demonstrators were injured in a scuffle when 1000 unemployed demonstrated before the Communist-dominated local chamber of labor, protesting the chamber's alleged lack of interest in the problems of the unemployed.

A column of police reserves hurried from Minerino, 8 miles southwest of Andria, and broke up several of the mobs besieging villas in the Andria area.

Reports from Barletta and Trani, on the coast, 10 miles east of Andria, said the local chamber of labor called a general strike "in support of the unemployed."

Budget to Curb Air Force Plans

tablishment estimates—15.9 billions in all for new authorizations. An estimate of 525 millions is provided for stockpiling and a "contingent" 800 millions for UMT. Few see any chance of the latter actually being spent.

Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), new chairman of the House Armed Service Committee, promised a fight to restore the air power funds. He told reporters he is confident "an overwhelming majority" of Congress will add whatever is necessary to build the 70-group program.

The Georgian declared it a "mistake" to divide the military budget equally among the three armed forces to keep them "satisfied." He plans to call Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington before his committee Wednesday to testify in the matter.

Other members joined Vinson's protest. Representative Carl Hinshaw (R., Calif.) declared the President has "reneged" on the action of the last Congress. Representative Mahon (D., Tex.), who is slated to head the merged House armed forces appropriations subcommittee, said he wants to study the budget and hear the testimony of defense chiefs before commenting. But he added: "I haven't changed my mind on the need for 70 groups."

The fiscal 1949 appropriation bill, passed last year, contemplated that the USAF reach 66 active groups by next summer. Current burden of cost comes a year or more later. The Army, Navy and Air Force have been slowly building up to the larger strengths authorized last June, aiming to reach those goals before June 30. So, even though the expansion program is halted half way, next year's cost will be greater.

"The principal objective we should have in mind in planning for our national defense at this time," said Mr. Truman, "is to build a foundation of military strength which can be sustained for a period of years without excessive strain on our productive resources, and which will permit rapid expansion should need arise."

"Relative Military Readiness"

The President added that his defense budget is based on plans for "a national defense position of relative military readiness, coupled with a higher degree of mobilization preparedness."

He said that in formulating this plan, he and his advisers considered the "international, strategic and economic aspects" of our defense needs.

Here is what the budget provides for the three armed services:

Army

Continue the Army at its present strength of 677,000 officers and men—about 270,000 of whom will be overseas. The total compares with 538,000 last April 1, and 900,000 to be reached by June 30 under the abandoned program. The latter included 110,000 one-year trainees. No breakdown was given of the ten-division, 677,000-man Army between regular forces and trainees.

Army funds also would provide for an average National Guard strength of 325,000 officers and men and end-of-the-year total of 350,000. All told, 230,000 Reserves would be in a regular training status—a substantial increase—while 134,500 college men would be taking ROTC training.

The budget allows the Army $4,476,000,000 for military functions, not including its share of a 430-million-dollar housing bill, tentatively budgeted, but which requires congressional authorization, and another 400 millions budgeted for military pay increases which also must be passed by Congress.

Navy

For the Navy, $4,347,000,000 in new "obligational authority" is provided, exclusive of its share of the 830 construction and pay item. This will permit 731 ships to be operated in the active fleet, 288 of them combat craft. Another 549 vessels will be kept in reserve. The makeup of the fleet will be changed to put greater emphasis on antisubmarine activities.

While 406 millions will be spent on shipbuilding in fiscal 1950, only 52 millions are asked for new projects—laying down one new minesweeper and starting the conversion of six destroyer escorts into more effective sub killers.

Funds are included for continuing work on the new "super" aircraft carrier—which officials now say will cost 152 millions—and for carrying on work on 14 other new ships and the conversion of 32 others. The keel-laying of one big hunter-killer of the 1949 program will be deferred until further studies are made of this new type.

527,000 Officers and Men

The naval service will be allowed an average strength of 527,000 officers and men next year, compared to the strength of 588,000 authorized for this year and 488,000 last spring. Naval manpower will be maintained at 439,474 and the Marines at 85,716. There will be 281,000 Navy and Marine reservists training in organized units and 14,632 ROTC students and 4311 other officer candidates in college.

Funds are provided to maintain 7450 naval planes in "active inventory" next year—1050 less than those operative this year. A total of 687 millions in cash and contract authority is included for ordering new aircraft. Officials estimate that about 40 per cent of the Navy's total appropriations will go for naval aviation, including the cost of operating aircraft carriers. The percentage would be more like 60 per cent if supporting ships, such as the destroyer screen of carrier forces, are included, it was said.

Air Force

The Air Force gets $4,554,000,000 in new spending authority. This will provide for 412,000 officers and men—compared to the end-of-the-year strength of 461,000 authorized by Congress last year, and 368,000 last spring. It also provides for 9200 aircraft in active inventory by the end of the year, compared with 9780 this year, and 10,297 originally planned for this year. The cut is largely in trainers and Army support planes.

In cutting the USAF to 48 groups President Truman said "within the limit of the funds provided, it is possible that adjustments in unit structure or strategic planning may at any time require changes in the number of active groups."

Twenty-seven groups will be maintained in the National Guard, which will be build up to a strength of 49,500 officers and men receiving 125 hours flight training. Reservists numbering 67,512 will have 100 hours training, plus 6300 air ROTC students.

Cash and contract authority for new planes total $1,480,000,000, compared to $1,957,000,000 available this year. The new money will permit 1669 planes to be bought—about a thousand less than this year.

Including naval aircraft procurement money, a total of 34 million airframe pounds of planes can be ordered next year, the President said. About 37 million pounds of aircraft will be delivered next year, he added.

Common Defense Projects

Draft and UMT—The President declared that it is essential to continue Selective Service for the present, even though voluntary recruiting provides most of the men needed by the armed forces. He urged adoption of a permanent UMT program and asked a contingent appropriation of 800 millions—not in the national military establishment budget—to pay for it.

Research—New appropriations of 534 millions are asked to carry on the direct cost of research and development programs. This is about 40 millions less than 1949 outlays.

Industrial Mobilization—Funds for this criticized phase of current defense planning are more than doubled—from 57 millions this year to 129 next.

Pay—Officials said that 400 millions have been tentatively budgeted for pay increases under legislation now being drafted to carry out the recommendations of the Hook Board. Another 100 million will be required to put that plan into effect.

At present, the budget message disclosed, 38 per cent of military expenditures—about five billion dollars—are spent for pay, subsistence, travel, welfare, training, clothes and medical care of personnel. This averages $3100 a man.

Public Works—Only 55 million dollars is included in the budget for construction at Army, Navy and Air Force posts—very little for new housing. However, a supplemental appropriation of 430 millions is planned, after a new authorization bill is submitted and passed. The latter is expected to include construction of a long-range guided missile test center, a radar picket fence and at least 100 millions for housing.

Reserves—Larger and better trained reserve forces are provided under the budget. An average of 949,000 reservists will receive regular training at a cost of 795 millions—compared with 635,000 officers and men trained this year.

Cost of New Legislation Proposed by the President

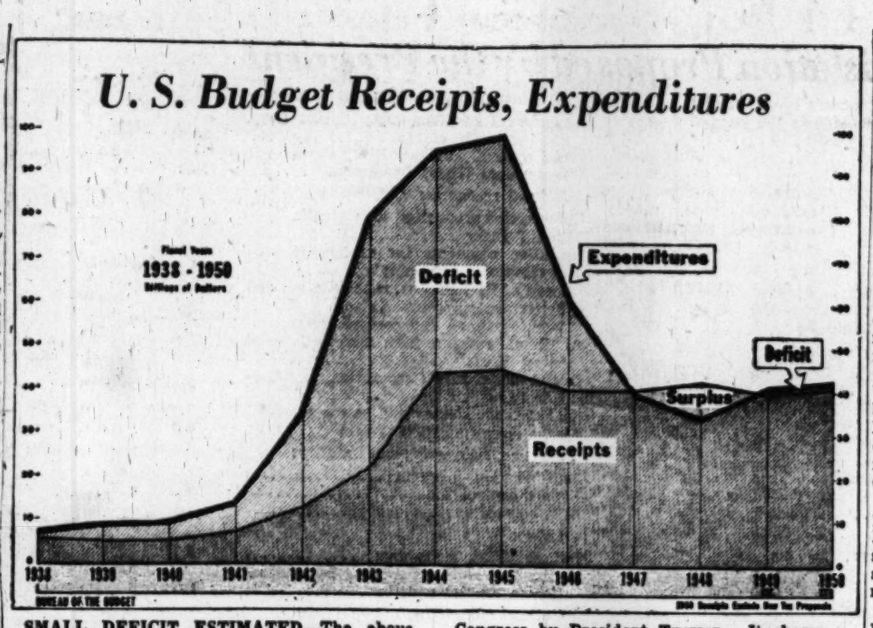
Truman Requests 41.8 Billion Budget



SMALL DEFICIT ESTIMATED—The above chart of Federal budget receipts and expenditures for the fiscal years 1938-50 is included in the budget message delivered yesterday to Congress by President Truman. It shows a small estimated deficit for the 1950 fiscal year—with receipts for the new year based on figures excluding new tax proposals fense, will take another $1.6 billion.

All other activities, general Government costs, housing, education, labor, finance, commerce and industry, come to but 2.3 billion dollars, or 5 per cent of the budget.

Of the 6.4 billion dollar cost of new legislation submitted to Congress, 5.6 billion dollars is directly related to international and National defense.

Government obligations have been reviewed to make sure they meet only essential needs. As a result, cutbacks are recommended in the veterans' hospital construction program; new public works are asked only when it is not in the public interest to postpone them, and a postal rate increase is recommended to lower the postal deficit.

To promote increased efficiency and economy, one million dollars is budgeted as a management improvement fund. To provide strengthened management, more pay is recommended for heads and assistant heads of Federal agencies. Overhauling of the Classification Act to provide more realistic pay for career employes is also recommended.

National defense and international outlays will rise further in 1951. We must face squarely the fact that we foresee a deficit in the next fiscal year under existing tax laws, even without any allowance for new military aid, and that even higher expenditures will probably be required in future years.

Inflationary pressures will receive further impetus from the scheduled payment to veterans of about two billion dollars from the National Service Life Insurance fund in the next fiscal year.

Under these circumstances, it is not prudent to keep Government finances in unbalance or precarious balance. The program submitted to Congress represents a level below which our responsibilities will not permit us to go. New taxes are therefore required.

The Budget is large because our responsibilities are large. The Budget reflects the realities of our international position and our concern for a strong and progressive domestic economy. This Nation today is the strongest bulwark of freedom in the world.

Taxes to Yield 41 Billion

Assuming continued full employment and current business levels, present taxes will yield 41 billion dollars in the next fiscal year, a billion more than this year. Individual tax collections are falling off sharply as a result of the GOP's 1948 tax cut. But taxes on corporations will yield substantially more this year and the next, due to general prosperity and rising profits.

Tax refunds are running exceptional high. This year, for the first time, they will not be entered in the Budget as expenditures, but as deductions from revenue. They are not true operating costs of Government.

Because of the 600-million-dollar 1949 fiscal year deficit, there can be no sizable reduction in the National debt this year. The 1948 tax cut is the main reason for this.

The European Recovery Program will cost 4.6 billion dollars this fiscal year and four billions next, or nearly 70 per cent of estimated international outlays.

Aid to western Europe and the mutual self-help it has stimulated has already produced substantial progress toward economic recovery and political stability. Europe's agricultural and industrial production is increasing and the momentum must be maintained if the nations now aided are to become independent of outside assistance by the July, 1952, target date. To meet this obpective, it is important that Congress extend the Reciprocal Trade Act, with fewer restrictions.

To avert a gap in ECA operations, a supplemental appropriation of 1250 million dollars for the current fiscal year will be necessary, in addition to the 4.3 billion asked for fiscal 1950.

In extending the Economic Cooperation Act, Congress should eliminate the artificial bookkeeping shift which charged three billion dollars of this year's foreign aid spending to the big 1948 fiscal year surplus.

In furnishing military supplies to certain North Atlantic nations, military help will follow the economic aid pattern in calling for a large measure of mutual aid and self-help.

Specific legislation on other foreign assistance programs will be presented at a later date, since needs cannot accurately be foreseen at this time. These now include aid to Greece, Turkey, China and Korea. The budget tentatively estimates 600 million dollars in appropriations for these.

Foreign relief at the present time is confined chiefly to Army-occupied areas of Germany and Japan, and the budget provides another billion for this.

Expansion of information and education activities is the principal change asked in the State Department.

National defense recommendations are based on a plan of relative military readiness, coupled with a higher degree of mobilization preparedness. This is a start toward a national defense program in which our air, naval and land forces plan and operate as a team under a unified strategic concept. It gives priority to air power and to strengthening the civilian reserve components. It continues to emphasize research, development and industrial mobilization.

To an initial $13,100,000,000 defense budget, these items are added: 530 million dollars for stockpiling strategic materials and other activities supporting defense, and 600 million dollars for the first year's cost of universal training.

Veterans' benefits and services are put at $5,500,000,000, about $1,300,000,000 under the current year but still more than one eighth of the total budget.

Primary Obligation

Our primary obligation is to veterans' deceased from service causes or disabled in the service. Congress should weigh any new or extended benefits to veterans lacking service disabilities in the light of existing social welfare programs available to all, veterans and non-veterans alike. Veterans and their families will soon constitute 40 per cent of the population.

To continue with the construction of the full number of 90 authorized veterans' hospitals will result in serious overbuilding, in terms of beds needed to meet foreseeable requirements. Twenty-four hospital projects have therefore been canceled, and a reduction is planned in the capacity of 14 others.

Three principal steps should be taken now to strengthen and complete the system of social insurance for all our people:

First, old-age and survivors insurance should be extended to nearly all the 25 million gainfully employed persons not now covered; the scale of benefits should be sharply raised; benefits should be provided for women at an earlier age, and higher part-time earnings should be permitted.

Second, disability insurance should be provided to protect against loss of earnings during illness or other temporary disability, and to assure continuing annuities to workers who become permanently disabled, and therefore unable to earn a livelihood.

Third, a comprehensive national health program should be established, centering in a national system of medical care insurance, accompanied by improved services and facilities for medical care.

Not only should the scheduled half of 1 per cent increase in payroll taxes start on July 1, the date set for broadening the act, but we should raise the present $3000 ceiling on taxable earnings to help defray the cost. To make the system self-supporting, a further increase in the payroll tax should be made to finance health insurance.

To strengthen local health services, Congress is asked to double the general health grants to States, raising them to 22 million dollars.

Many of our most acute emergency housing needs, especially of veterans, have been met, but the Federal housing program still has a long way to go.

A census of housing should be authorized as part of the 1950 decennial census. To permit cities to start clearing their slums and preparing sites necessary for sound urban development, the Budget asks Federal grants of 100 million dollars a year for five years, loan authorizations of 25 million in fiscal 1950 and increases later to provide a one-billion loan total for the five-year period.

In the private housing field, Congress is asked to revise the financial structure of loan agencies to encourage substitution of private capital for Federal investments, to permit them to borrow in emergency from the Treasury and to give the Home Loan Bank Board more specific authority over borrowing and lending operations of member associations.

Federal Aid Need Acute

With every month that passes, a new and broader program of Federal assistance for low-rent public housing becomes more necessary. Legislation recommended would provide Federal assistance to construct 1,050,000 low-rent units over a seven-year period.

We are not yet assuring all the children of our Nation the opportunity of receiving the basic education which is essential to a strong democracy. It is urgent that Congress enact legislation providing grants to the States in support of a basic minimum program of elementary and secondary education for all our children. The budget includes 300 million dollars to launch such a program in the next fiscal year.

Apart from farm price supports, estimated at 538 million dollars in 1950, expenditures for agriculture are expected to be larger than in 1949. This is because of the higher level of loan disbursements for rural electrification, larger outlays to encourage conservation, smaller net repayment of FFMC loans and the proposed international wheat agreement.

Natural Resources

Expenditures for natural resources are estimated at $1,861,000,000, an increase of 245 million. The largest resource item is 725 millions for the Atomic Energy Commission, including increased funds for production of fissionable materials and development of the science and technology of atomic energy. Other large expenditures include 481 million dollars for flood control and 344 million dollars for development of water resources in the West.

Flood control will be limited almost entirely to continuation of work on projects started in prior years. Special emphasis is given to the Mississippi River Basin, but other major river basin projects are under way on the Atlantic seaboard and Gulf Coasts, the Central Valley and Los Angeles areas of California and the Columbia Basin.

Congress is again asked to improve the TVA steam plant blocked last session.

Legislation is recommended to provided for proper conservation and planned use of Federal oil reserves under the sea. Congress also is asked to authorize incentive payments for the exploration and development of strategic and critical minerals, and to provide financial assistance to encourage the development of synthetic fuels from coal, lignite and oil shale.

Postal Rate Increase

An increase in postal rates, with particular reference to second-class mail, to bring them more nearly into line with the increased cost of postal operations, is again recommended. The estimated 400-million-dollar postal deficit imposes on general taxpayers a burden that should properly be borne by users of the service. Postal business has reached a record volume, most of which is carried at rates that do no cover handling costs.

Our highways are not being improved as fast as they wear out. But high costs and limited construction capacity make it undesirable to spend more than the 501 million estimated.

To finance standby price and wage controls, and other anti-inflation powers asked of Congress, 41 million dollars is provided in the Budget. The survey of steel production and output of other shortage materials, looking to Governments loans or direct construction of plant facilities by the Government, will be financed by one million dollars in the President's fund.

Additional funds are made available to the Federal Trade Commission and the Justice Department to permit more adequate investigation of the extent of monopoly and monopolistic practices. A strong antimonopoly program is essential for the preservation of our free enterprise system.

For the 1950 fiscal year, the Government's labor programs will cost 187 million dollars, an increase of three million. The Labor Department should be strengthened through reorganization to bring together the units which properly belong to it. Legislation will be offered to this end.

Interest on the public debt will increase 125 million dollars for the second straight year, bringing the total in the budget for interest on the debt to 5450 million dollars.

Truman Asks Social Laws, 'Long Overdue'

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

President Truman's program of social welfare, health and security legislation is not new—it is just a continuation of a national policy established by the Social Security Act of 1935, he told Congress in his budget message.

Little progress has been made toward achieving the objectives of that national policy in the last 10 years, Mr. Truman asserted. The result has been that much of the machinery has been thrown out of gear.

He points out that as the 1935 program is working today public assistance payments are greater than payments under old-age and survivors' insurance. They also are greater in many cases for persons out of work than unemployment insurance.

Public assistance payments, he said, were designed in the original law, just "as a backstop—as a second line of defense," and not to be superior to the insurance features as they are at present.

Thoroughly Discussed

The President used forceful language to indicate that he thought his welfare and health programs had been thoroughly discussed and were well understood.

"These recommendations," he said, "have had extended public discussion. Action is long overdue." He is confident, he said, that Congress will enact the legislation promptly "to achieve an integrated, comprehensive system of social insurance."

Mr. Truman's recommendations would just about double the present social security and welfare payments—chiefly provided by payroll taxes.

"Under the Social Security Act, the national policy contemplated that old-age and survivors insurance would be the primary Government measure affording economic protection to the needy aged and dependent children, and that unemployment compensation would provide temporary assistance to the unemployed," the President said.

"Other types of social insurance were to be added later to provide more adequate protection against major economic hazards of our society."

Recommends Three Steps

He recommended "three principal steps" which he said should be taken now "to strengthen and complete the system of social insurance and thereby to make our governmental programs consistent with the basic national policy in this field." These he listed as:

1. Old-age and survivors insurance should be extended to nearly all the 25 million gainfully employed not now covered. The scale of benefits should be sharply raised. Benefits should be provided for women at an earlier age. Higher part-time earnings for recipients of pensions should be permitted.

(In another section Mr. Truman stated: "My proposal to strengthen the unemployment compensation system contemplates that coverage will be extended to workers in small establishments, Federal employes, and other workers not now insured. It contemplates that in some States the level of benefits will be raised and their duration extended.")

2. Disability insurance should be provided to protect against loss of earnings during illness and other temporary disability, and to assure continuing annuities to workers who become permanently disabled and unable to earn a livelihood.

3. A comprehensive national health program should be established, centering in a national system of medical care insurance, plus improved services and facilities for public health and medical care.

Bigger Payroll Taxes

He said the legislation should include measures to (1) establish administrative procedures, (2) authorize benefit payments, and (3) provide the money.

He asked that an increase in payroll taxes from 1 to 1½ per cent, now scheduled to begin next January 1 be advanced to July 1. He asked that these taxes apply on more than the first $3000 of earnings as at present. He urged that the payroll tax be extended to workers and employers not now covered.

He said that additional payroll taxes should be imposed to pay for medical care and disability insurance. His desire, he said, is that "the whole social insurance system will continue to be substantially self-supporting."

Benefit payments and administrative expenses, which, excepting unemployment insurance, are paid from trust funds set up from payroll taxes, etc., are estimated this year, under existing laws, at 1.3 billion dollars. Under the changes Mr. Truman asked, he said, these payments would be doubled.

The importance Mr. Truman attaches to this part of his program was evident in the force with which he expressed himself. After stating the matter had had sufficient discussion, that action was necessary at once, and that he was confident that Congress would adopt his suggestions, he added:

"In addition, I repeat my recommendation that the Congress give departmental status to the Federal Agency."

Mr. Truman didn't confine his recommendations on his public insurance program to the one section. He mentioned it under "Labor," and again under "Veterans."

In the latter he indicated his hope that the welfare program may soon take over some of the financial burdens of veterans legislation.

"The necessity for new or extended benefits for veterans without service disabilities should be judged, not solely from the standpoint of service in our armed forces, but in the light of existing social welfare programs available to all, veterans and nonveterans alike," he said.

"In recent years social security protection, including unemployment and old-age and survivors insurance and old-age assistance, has been made available to a large percentage of our general population.

"Prior to World War I, the lack of such general benefits was, of course, one of the main reasons for the enactment of special benefits to veterans.

"At the present time we seek to broaden and extend these social security programs and to enact a comprehensive national health and disability program for all our pepole, including veterans, who with their immediate families will soon constitute 40 per cent of the population."

years to come from the long-term program of which it is a part.

Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) and Representative Halleck (R., Ind.) said the Truman requests would put the Government billions of dollars in the red. Capehart said Mr. Truman is overestimating revenues heavily, and that it is dangerous to spend so much at this time.

Looks to Streamlining

Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.) suggested that Government streamlining proposed by Herbert Hoover would save enough to balance the budget. Senator Butler (R., Nebr.) said he would fight a tax increase, and favors reaching a balance by cutting costs.

A sympathetic study by Congress was predicted by Senator Gillette (D., Iowa). He said it would give attention to all requests, but "there is a bottom to the barrel." He flatly opposes universal training asked by Mr. Truman.

Senator McClellan (D., Ark) said he too is not convinced universal training is necessary as long as there is a draft. He spoke out for a balanced budget. He said he would vote for higher taxes to avoid a deficit if Congress approves the budget totals.

Taft to Study Budget

The Senate's Republican policy chief, Senator Taft of Ohio, said he would study the budget before commenting.

Representative Priest of Tennessee, House majority whip, said the figures emphasize the failure to attain real peace.

"While this record peacetime budget may be cut somewhat under present conditions," he said, "it could be reduced considerably in a peaceful world."

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the budget "merely represents the fund requests as they now are known. Those figures are likely to be increased almost weekly by new requests. Unless there are some economies, the budget can't be balanced even with the four billion dollars of new taxes the President has asked."

Senator Russell (D., Ga.), also an Appropriations member, called the budget "a challenge to Congress. If all of these expenditures are going to be made, Congress should have the courage to raise taxes to pay for them."

Celler Bill Clinches Tidelands Oil Claims

By The Associated Press

An Administration bill has been introduced in Congress to clinch Federal claims to tidelands oil.

The measure, sponsored by Representative Celler (D., N.Y.), also relinquishes all Federal title to lands beneath inland navigable waters within State boundaries.

The bill would enact into law the ruling of the Supreme Court in 1947 that the Federal Government has paramount interest over submerged lands off California's coast and offshore tidelands.

Federal Cafeteria-Recreation Service Proposed by Truman

President Truman yesterday urged Congress to establish a Government agency to operate all Federal cafeterias and recreational activities here.

Such an act would affect Government Services, Inc., a nonprofit organization which runs most Federal cafeterias and recreation concessions, and the private management of Pentagon and Agriculture Department cafeterias.

The President, in his budget message, told Congress:

"I recommend that the Congress create a new, self-supporting Government cafeteria and recreational service, primarily for Federal employes in Government buildings and on Government property.

"At present, these services are provided by several organizations which do not fall within the normal governmental framework. This is essentially a governmental responsibility and should be subject to the usual processes of governmental review and control."

GSI is a two-million-dollar nonstock membership corporation and operates 120 units, including 42 cafeterias in Federal buildings.

Bill Is Introduced To Repeal Tarriff Act

Representative Doughton (D., N. C.) introduced yesterday a bill to repeal the Republican-enacted 1948 Tariff Act and to restore the reciprocal trade agreements law in substantially its original form.

Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, put the tariff bill in first place for committee consideration, ahead of taxes and Social Security legislation.

Public hearings were set for January 24 and Doughton predicted Congress will pass the trade bill early in February. It would provide for two-year extension of the act beyond July 1.

Proposed District Budget May Mean Deficit of 18 Million Dollars

Record 103 Million Dollars Anticipates Sales Tax, Fails to Include Pay Boosts

The District's shaky financial future was spelled out in the budget for the fiscal year 1950 submitted yesterday to Congress.

In appraisal, District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler said bluntly:

"We are really facing an 18-million-dollar deficit."

The District budget given Congress by President Truman calls for record expenditures totaling $103,321,427.

This is a jump of roughly 3½ million dollars over estimated expenditures for the current fiscal year.

The budget, however, is a masterpiece of economy. Operating expenses have been slashed to a minimum. Capital outlay for improvements will lag more than a million dollars behind the 1949 fiscal year.

District officials "balanced" the new budget by anticipating 10 million dollars in revenue for a 2 per cent sales tax (the same one which failed to pass the Eightieth Congress) and ignoring the fact that a pay raise for District employes is almost a certainty.

IF the sales tax were enacted by May so that it could be put into operation July 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year—and IF there were no pay raise—the District would have one million dollars with which to meet anticipated deficiencies during the year, plus a surplus of $1,922,373 in the general fund and $219,115 in the highway fund.

But Fowler concedes these figures are in the realm of fancy.

Here Are Possibilities

These are the face-the-fact possibilities:

If the District's 18,000 employes are awarded the $330-a-year pay raise given last year to Federal workers, it will cost $5,33 ,595, thus eliminating the general fund surplus and creating a $3,414,222 deficit.

If the raise is made retroactive to July 1, 1948—and there is considerable sentiment for this step—the deficit will climb to $8,699,222.

If the sales tax proposal fails to pass Congress, the possible deficit will soar to $18,699,222.

In effect, the District government has challenged Congress to slash what is already a skeleton budget or find additional sources of revenue.

"To balance the budget," said Fowler, "we need the sales tax. And to meet the additional cost of either type of pay raise—retroactive or not—additional funds are needed."

Even the sales tax won't be enough if the pay raise is approved.

"We've got to be prepared to talk in terms of increased taxes on cigarettes, alcoholic beverages and admission prices," said Fowler, "and, if a major building construction program is wanted, a loan from the Federal Government or some other source."

More Direct Taxes Considered

Fowler emphasized that "only 154,000 persons in the District are now paying any direct taxes and we are thinking in terms of making more people pay taxes directly."

He pointed out, too, that the Federal Government has a major stake in finding the means for the pay raise since it would mean increased income tax payments to the Federal Government.

Anticipating budget difficulties, the Commissioners last June laid down the law to department heads preparing their 1950 budget requests: Strict economy, no additional employes or construction unless absolutely essential.

Requests totaling 120 million dollars were submitted. They were rejected by the Commissioners. Department heads were told to be more realistic.

In September, requests totaling a shade over 110 million dollars were submitted. The Commissioners whittled these to the present budget proposal of $103,321,427.

Other Financial Headaches

And there are still other financial headaches ahead for the District government, namely:

1. The budget makes no provision for the Rent Control Administration which although scheduled to expire this spring will undoubtedly be continued, according to Fowler, at a cost of between $100,000 and $150,000.

2. There is no provision to answer the recommendations of Dr. George D. Strayer who in a report to Congress recommended a 38 million dollar school construction and renovation program for the District.

3. No funds are allocated to finance the proposed reduction from 72 to 60 hours a week for firemen. Fowler estimates this would cost $623,000 a year more.

4. The proposal to give police and firemen eight paid holidays off a year. The Police Department believes it can handle the extra time with its present personnel, but the Fire Department would require 26 additional men.

5. Possible increased pensions for retired policemen and firemen, their widows and orphans. This is in addition to the increase which would result in police and fire retirement payments if the municipal pay raise becomes effective.

The Commissioners also have the problem of keeping competent executives and professional men in key posts of the District government satisfied with present wage levels. The new budget provides no salary increases for top executives. It has become increasingly difficult to get top-flight medical men for important posts and the District now has nine such vacancies.

With all this, the Commissioners are also considering raising exemptions in individual and business income taxes which would result in a drop in revenue from this source.

The proposed District budget authorizes 196 new jobs and provides for capital outlay of $15,541,650 which is $1,305,333 less than is being spent this year on permanent inmprovements.

Here is how the various departments, agencies and institutions fared in the new District budget:

Board of Public Welfare: The board asked for $14,280,790 and was put down for $14,487 additional by the Commissioners. However, that extra sum is all earmarked for St. Elizabeths Hospital.

More than half of the board's budget—$7,846,277—will be paid to St. Elizabeths for support of the city's indigent insane.

This is based on estimates that an average of 5205 District patients will be cared for daily at $4.13 a day.

Only construction item in the welfare budget is $185,000 in capital outlay to complete construction of a residence for employes and members of the medical staff at the District Training School, Laurel.

Welfare gets 10 new employes in the budget. But the funds provided for agency services means, said Acting Director Raymond Clapp, that the bureau won't be able to add to the case load it is carrying in the current fiscal year.

The Commissioners made a radical slash—more tnah half—in the request for funds for care of children in foster homes and institutions.

St. Elizabeths Hospital: This arm of the Federal Cecurity Administration did well in the budget, getting $10,174,185, which includes the District's payment, for operations. In addition:

1. An allocation of $1,044,000 to construct and equip a huge storeroom; (2) Another $2,015,000 to erect and equip a new "continuous treatment" building to house patients who don't show promise of recovery; (3) Another $624,000 for major repairs, largely to the electrical system, and (4) Another $150,000 for the planning of the two treatment buildings and the demolition and removal of two old buildings.

Public Schools: The Commissioners approved all the major requests of the Board of Education. However, the board had been instructed not to request what it most needs—sites for buildings in newly developed residental areas of the city and new school buildings.

The budget provides $1,779,233 less than the $25,102,683 under which the board is operating this year.

The budget does not provide for a pay raise or for sick and emergency leave. Nor does it provide for any action on the Strayer report for 38 million dollars in school building improvements.

Only half as much ($2,480,250) is to be expended on capital outlay as is being spent this fiscal year.

This sum will be used to continue or complete construction on six projects, three white and three Negro, previously authorized. They are:

Walker-Jones, a 24-room Negro elementary school with auditorium and lunchroom at 3d and L sts. nw., $139,000; Sousa, a white junior high school, 34th st. and Minnesota ave. se., $306,000; Birney, 24-room Negro elementary school with auditorium and lunchroom, Nichols ave. and Sumner rd. se., $65,000; Stanton, 24-room white elementary school with auditorium and lunchroom, Good Hope and Naylor rds. se., $517,440; Orson Run, 24-room white elementary school with auditorium and lunchroom in the vicinity of Ozon Run se., $625,000; Banneker, 15-room addition to the Negro junior high at Euclid st. and Georgia ave. nw., $195,000.

Another budget item is $213,810 for preparing plans and specifications for 11 additional school buildings. They are:

Burdick Vocational completion, Davis elementary addition, Keene elementary addition, new elementary school at River ter., Negro Browne junior high addition, Hine junior high replacement, Negro Dunbar high additions and alterations, Negro Francis junior high addition, new Negro junior high at Pomeroy and Stanton rds. se., Negro Slowe elementary completion, Negro Terrell junior high replacement.

Deleted was a request for $19,500 for plans for an addition to Randle Highlands elementary. The Commissioners approved $405,000 for furnishing and equipping new and existing school buildings.

Approved also were 59 new job positions, which include 16 new teachers for Negro schools and principals of two new Negro schools, Miller junior high and Nalle elementary.

The budget provides $75,000 to begin a five-year, $360,000 program to eliminate fire hazards in local schools.

Health Department: The appropriation won't allow for any radical expansion. Requests were ignored for 12 new nurses, one nursing supervisor and one nursing clerk to improve department's service in local schools. These were denied and the budgeteers lopped off five nurses now on the department rolls.

Personnel for a proposed dental clinic in Anacostia also was denied. Dr. George Ruhland, District Health Officer, had asked for two medical inspectors to improve "woefully adequate" medical inspection in Negro schools. This request also was deleted.

Gallinger Hospital: The budget provides $905,651 for final construction of the long-planned pediatrics and crippled children's building, but there's a hitch.

Budget watchdogs chopped off about a half million dollars from the original request on the presumption that Federal funds would be available under the Hill-Burton Act. Then it was learned that Gallinger occupies Federal property and could not qualify. The Federal Government will be asked to turn over the land to the District to make grant possible.

Also authorized in budget:

Furnishing and equipping the new pediatrics building, $382,909.

Completion of plans and construction of a new laboratory building, $279,000 and $49,400 to equip the new lab.

A new pathologist and two laboratory technicians to staff the new unit.

Disallowed were requests for funds to expand the hospital's operating suite facilities and for pay raises for medical chiefs.

On the latter request, the hospital pointed out that its best men are being lured away by better offers from other institutions.

Gallinger's request for funds for hospital and medical supplies also was trimmed to a "grossly inadequate" $232,800.

Freedmen's Hospital: Because of pay increases, Freedmen's operating budget of $2,443,000 from the Federal Government and an estimated $265,800 it will collect from the District will stretch just about as far as the figure allowed in the 1949 fiscal budget. The budget did not include one million dollars requested for planning a new 25-million-dollar, 700-bed general

Glenn Dale Sanatorium: Glenn Dale got an allocation of $65,000 to erect a second, four-family apartment building to house staff physicians. The item was inserted by the Commissioners during the budget processing although it had not been asked in the original request.

Glenn Dale also is authorized $10,000 to equip another four-family apartment house which was in the 1948 fiscal budget.

Police: The budget requests submitted by Maj. Robert J. Barrett were pared by nearly half a million dollars to a little more than 6½ millions.

Although this is an increase over the present fiscal year, the margin is mostly accounted for by the increased cost of supplies and the cost of automatic promotions.

Barrett did get 30 new police privates and 19 new civilian employes. He was denied $3500 for a new convertibl. parade limousine.

The Police Department had asked $135,000 to convert its radio system to frequency modulation. The Commissioners chopped the item to $60,000.

FIRE DEPARTMENT: No additional men are provided for in the proposed new budget but it does allow for replacement of some worn-out apparatus and vehicles.

BOARD OF RECREATION: There is a very slight increase in funds allotted the Board of Recreation. However, for improvements, it will allow only one fourth the money requested for bettering playgrounds and for rehabilitating the bath houses at the Georgetown and Rosedale swimming pools.

The Commissioners blue-penciled a $25,000 item for additional work on the old E. V. Brown School recently turned into a Chevy Chase recreation center. Six more recreation directors were asked. Two were allowed.

Courts: The budget does not provide for any additional judges or for any increase in court employes. The Municipal Court's allowance for juror fees was upped $15,000 to pay for the $1-a-day increase for jurors authorized last year by Congress.

Public Works: There are no new highway projects although $5,125,000 is ticketed for jobs already under construction. The same holds good for sewer projects with $2,505,000 listed for continuing existing jobs. The Water Division won approval of a request for one million dollars to complete rehabilitation of the Bryant st. pumping station.

Washington Aqueduct: The capital outlay will provide mainly for expansion at the Dalecarlia Reservoir.

Public Library: The library will be able to operate at about the same pace as in the 1949 fiscal year. But expansion and renovation will be slight.

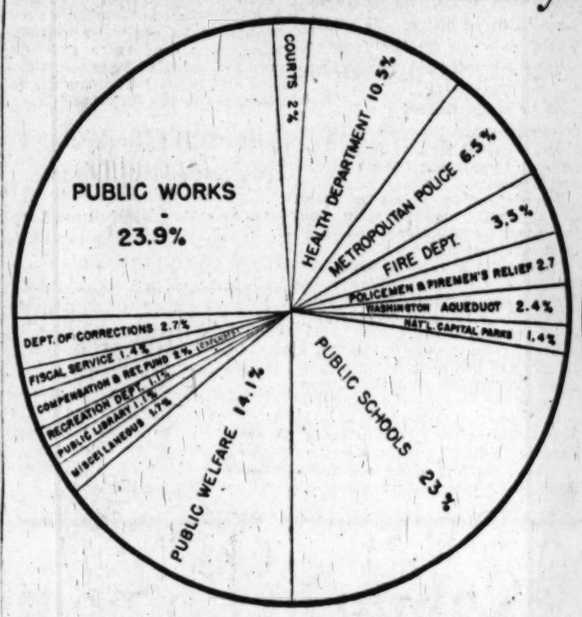
NCPPC: Congress was asked to give the National Capital Park and Planning Commission $73,700 so it could continue its planning for redevelopment of local slum areas. Further slum clearance money was withheld pending completion of NCPPC plans.

In his message, President Truman said the role of NCPPC should be "redefined" and a stronger law put into effect for the proper deevlopment of the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

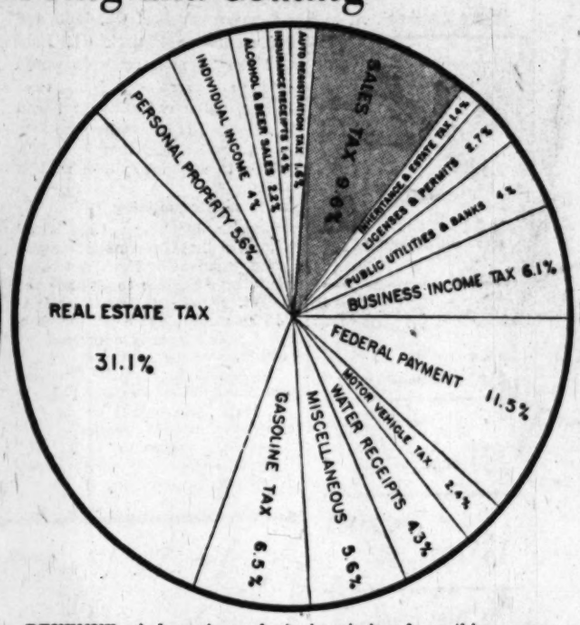
The NCPPC said it needed a larger allocation this coming fiscal year to complete city plans for submission at the District Sesquicentennial in 1950. It got $9200 more than last year.

Others: The District National Guard asked for $550,800 but the Commissioners slashed this to $96,900 . . . The Department of Corrections was allowed five new custodial officers at Lorton . . . Operations at the Zoo remain about the same with nothing provided for new construction . . . Salary increases and maintenance cost rises contributed to slightly higher budgets for most departments and agencies . . . The cost of policemen's and firemen's relief jumped from $2,500,000 to $2,900,000 . . . A $130,000 fund for the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Program is not included in the budget figure since it is derived solely from an increase in alcoholic beverage license fees.

Dollar Pie—District's Money Going and Coming



SPENDING—The pie chart above shows how the District proposes to spend the 103 million dollars it is asking Congress to appropriate during the 1950 fiscal year. It does not include another million expected to be needed later on in the year, nor does it allow for District pay raise expected to cost another 5.3 million dollars



REVENUE—A key piece of pie is missing from this revenue picture—the shaded area labeled Sales Tax. A sales tax would bring D. C. revenues for the year up to 104 millions. Another two millions tentatively called "surplus" is not represented in the chart. The "surplus" would become a deficit, even with a sales tax, if a District raise is ordered

President Asks Scaling Down Of Nevius Veterans' Hospital

The veterans' hospital proposed for the Nevius tract in Arlington will be reduced from 750 to 500 beds under a recommendation made to Congress by President Truman.

The hospital is one of 14 for veterans throughout the Nation that the President in his budget message said should be cut in size. He recommended outright cancellation of proposals for 24 other hospitals.

Elsewhere in his budget the President asked congressional authorization for a new census building at Suitland, Md., to be completed in time for the 1950 census.

The estimated cost of repairs to the White House has jumped from one million dollars to four million dollars, the budget showed. A supplemental appropriation to repair the old structure was among requests.

Other major Federal construction projects in the Greater Washington Area for which funds are recommended in the budget are:

New Senate Office Building, 1st and C sts. nw., 10 million dollars.

Courthouse for the District Court and the United States Court of Appeals, 3d st. and John Marshall pl. nw., five million dollars.

Research buildings, National Institute of Health, Bethesda, 17 million dollars.

General Accounting Office, 4th and G sts. nw., five million dollars.

A scale-model of the proposed GAO was approved yesterday by the Commission of Fine Arts. Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming said the next step will be to ask for bids on construction.

D. C. Senate Body to Meet

fact that the problems of the District are becoming larger and more difficult and awkward," Cain told the Senate.

Cain declared that if the rule were changed to let minority members serve on two major committees plus the District Committee, a number of Senators of both parties would be glad to serve on the District Committee.

Vice President-Elect Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) commented that "the District Committee is always a problem. I believe it was four years ago that we placed on that committee every former Governor who came into the Senate on the theory that Governors had more experience in Government than other Senators. I believe they rendered excellent service. We cannot expect a Senator to wish to remain on that committee forever.

"The Constitution makes the Congress the exclusive legislative body to consider District matters. Some day I may have something to say on that problem, but not now."

As a new member of the committee, Senator McCarthy made clear that he would side with the previously disclosed committee majority in favor of Washington home rule.

"I strongly favor the general idea of home rule for Washington," said McCarthy. "I think the people here should be running their own government. The affairs of the Nation and of the world are too important for the time of Senators to be taken up by running the city of Washington, which the people here are better equipped to do."

He pointed out that Congress would have to keep some measure of control over the Capital, but that an increased measure of home rule could be given to the District.

He said he favored giving District employes the pay raise denied them last year. On the question of the sales tax, he said he would not favor it as a general proposition, but that there might be special conditions in Washington which would make such a levy advisable. He said he had no strong feeling on it one way or the other, and would want to study it further before committing himself.

Tax 'Balances' D. C. Budget

sions a sales tax law on the books by May 1, in time to put the levy into operation by July 1.

They estimated 10 million dollars would be collected in the 1950 fiscal year, with merchants turning sales taxes over to the District in quarterly installments. The last quarter collections made in the 1950 fiscal year would reach the District in the following fiscal year.

Bates said every effort should be made to get the sales tax operating this spring, probably in May, so the returns could start being applied at once to any retroactive pay increase.

Bates said monthly returns would get the cash into the District at once when it is needed, and would boost the total revenue for next year so that it could be applied to pay raises. Any further deficit, he suggested, could be covered by short-term loans.

The sales tax plan passed the House last year by a vote of 116 to 71.

Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) a member of the House District Committee, said he will oppose the sales tax. He said he will again sponsor a substitute revenue plan to raise some 12 to 13 million more dollars a year for the District by boosting the local income tax rates and making it apply to thousands of persons here who do not now pay. Klein's bill was beaten last year by a 65-to-16 House vote.

Navy Asks Authority To Assign Wave Servants

The Navy asked Congress yesterday for authority to assign enlisted personnel and civilian employes to duty as household servants, cooks and waiters in female officers' quarters.

A legislative proposal tucked away in the back of the 1950 Navy budget would change the language of a rider carried annually in appropriation bills covering servants in officers' quarters. At present neither Navy civil employes nor enlisted men may serve in officers' quarters, unless, in the case of the latter, they specifically enlisted for such duties.

The new language would permit an "enlisted person or civilian employe" to be assigned to service duties in Wave or Nurses' quarters or in the "residence or quarters of naval attaches abroad."

A Navy spokesman said the purpose in asking the change was to permit civil employes—not enlisted personnel—to be assigned to Nurses' quarters. Unlike the male enlisted ranks, which includes a messman's branch, no women are enlisted specifically for service duties, it was said.

Navy Academy Needs Placed At $5,190,000

By The Associated Press

President Truman asked Congress yesterday for $5,190,000 for the Annapolis Naval Academy during the year beginning July 1.

This would be $170,000 more than the $5,020,000 appropriated last year for maintenance and operation.

In addition, the budget calls for $416,000 for operation of the academy laundry. Last year's appropriation was $406,000.

Money for various academy activities, with last year's figures in brackets, include:

Direct training and instruction, $1,565,000 ($1,489,650); operation, $1,383,486 ($1,280,990); housekeeping, $405,050 ($584,110); repairs, alterations and improvements, $1,146,867 ($1,177,830); fire and police protection, $283,960 ($283,810); administration, $308,053 ($297,410); care of ship models, $2000 ($2000); pay increase, $83,584 ($81,400).

The budget does not carry funds for a proposed airfield for the Academy nor the Bainbridge (Md.) Naval Training Center.

An airfield at Sandy Point was proposed for indoctrination flights for midshipmen. Congress authorized the Navy last June to acquire 2400 acres for it and authorized 12 million dollars appropriation for the initial project.

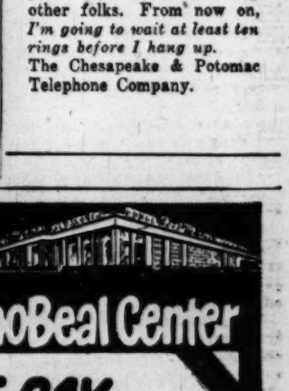
Landowners at Sandy Point objected to the airfield, and no money was appropriated.

$500,000,000 Bill For Schools Offered

Expenditure of 500 million dollars a year in Federal funds to be matched by a like amount of State funds for construction of school buildings is provided in a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Neely (D., W. Va.).

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny



Ever have a "ring and run" telephone caller? Yesterday afternoon, I was out in the kitchen making up some cookies to send to my nephew Tom (Tom is a corporal now at Camp Lee). Just when I was up to my elbows in cookie dough, the telephone began to ring.

I washed my hands as quick as I could and hurried in to answer it. But whoever it was that called only waited a few rings and then hung up. By the time I got there, there was no one on the line. I do wish people would give a body a minute to answer the telephone!

I suppose things like that work both ways, however. Perhaps I haven't been so patient, either, when calling other folks. From now on, I'm going to wait at least ten rings before I hang up.

Truman Asks Howard Program

A major building program for Howard University was recommended to Congress yesterday by President Truman.

The President's budget called for an appropriation of $5,659,425 for beginning construction of a law school, administration building, biology building, greenhouse and men's dormitory.

The budget, recommending a total expenditure of $8,054,425, also provides $60,000 for the preparation of plans for construction of a preclinical medical building and $124,000 for 32 new teaching positions.

Later Hours Denied Bars for Inaugural

The Commissioners yesterday turned thumbs down on a request to extend local bar closing hours to 4 a. m. during Inauguration Week.

A group of 25 large restaurateurs had asked permission to sell liquor after the usual 2 a. m. deadline from January 17 through January 21, arguing that it would protect visitors from "gouging" by after-hours clubs.

The Commissioners gave no reason publicly why they denied the request.

Previous to the Commissioners' action, two members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board had indicated no objection to the temporary hour setback. Final decision, however, in changing liquor regulations rests with the Commissioners.

Meanwhile, Lieut. Roy Blick, chief of District vice squad, announced that his men are keeping "a constant check" on any violations of law by the more than 100 after-hour bottle clubs, "operating in the District."

Blick added that "no concentrated drive" is presently underway to close the after-hours spots and pointed out that two convictions against a club operator are necessary for District Court to order a closing.

Four clubs are facing court trials as result of vice squad raids in the past six months.

Hospital Plans to Sue 84 on Bills

Alexandria Hospital, plagued with financial trouble, yesterday announced it will take to court 84 persons who have failed to pay their hospital bills.

Administrator Van C. Adams said the hospital was "reluctant" to adopt such a policy, but that "the critical financial position of the hospital leaves us with no alternative."

The hospita' announced last November that it was faced with impending bankruptcy. It was given $20,000 by the city at that time, and is now being surveyed to determine the source of its troubles and whether it should receive more city funds.

Adams said the hospital will seek judgments only against those who are financially able to pay. The new policy, he said will not affect persons cared for under the hospital's program for treating indigents.

The first of the suits will be filed in Alexandria Civil Court "in the next few days," Adams said.

Traffic Ticket 'Fixes' Given 103 Motorists

A 73-year-old man, who parked temporarily in a "no-parking" zone to pick up some perishable food, was one of 103 motorists for whom traffic tickets were adjusted last week.

Police reported that a traffic ticket for parking in a "no parking from 4 to 6:30 p. m." was changed to a warning for Elmer E. Rogers of 3705 Morrison st. nw., after he explained he had stopped briefly at a market to pick up the food.

A traffic ticket for parking in a "no parking anytime" zone was changed to a warning for Maurice F. Fitzgerald, a reporter for the Times-Herald, who explained he was on a special assignment.

Traffic tickets were canceled for the following motorists because of diplomatic immunity: Nolasco S. Icarangal, Phillipine Embarry, parked in a loading zone; Ruy Leitao, Portuguese Embassy, standing in a "no standing from 4 to 6:30 p. m." zone; Umberto De Martino, Italian Embassy, parked in a "no parking from 4 to 6 p. m." zone; Ignacio Ortiz de Mendivil, Spanish Embassy, parked in a "no parking anytime" zone; Ricardo S. Botto, 1701 16th st. nw., parked in alley; Manuel O'Brien, Peruvian Embassy, parked in a "no parking from 7 a. m. to 6:30 p. m." zone; Salvador Garcia Zapatero, 120 C st. ne., parked in a "no parking from 7 to 9:30 a. m." zone.

Truman, Barkley Pay Hike Favored By Senate GOP

By The Associated Press

The Senate Republican Policy Committee agreed yesterday to go along on a bill to increase the salaries of President Truman and Vice President-elect Barkley.

But Chairman Taft (Ohio) said there were Republican objections to acting now on a pay increase for department heads and others.

"We doubt the need of rushing these other pay increases through before January 20," Taft said.

Unless Congress acts before Mr. Truman and Barkley are inaugurated, they would be denied any pay boost during their terms of office under the Constitution.

The pending bill would raise the President's $75,000 pay to $100,000 and give him an additional $50,000 expense allowance. The pay of the Vice President and Speaker of the House would be boosted from $20,000 to $30,000 annually, with $10,000 expense allowances.

Because he already has been elected Speaker, Representative Rayburn (D., Tex.) probably would be denied the pay boost for his current two-year term.

members, followed by the Marine Corps Band.

The eight "divisions" will be headed by a marshal's section and will include service or service school units. Closing each divisional grouping will be "State" units, broken down to effect similarity in size between all divisions.

Governors to Participate

Many State units, including floats and bands, will be led by their respective Governors.

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, announced yesterday that he will be present in his capacity of Governor of his State. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, another unsuccessful candidate for President, has announced he will not attend inauguration ceremonies.

The marching column will proceed through the Capitol grounds from its initial point, thence along this route: west on Constitution ave., northwest on Pennsylvania ave., north on 15th st. nw., west on Pennsylvania ave. to 19th st. nw., and thence to "dispersal areas" as set forth in the general order.

Troops will execute "eyes left" in passing the President's reviewing stand on the south side of Pennsylvania ave. in front of the White House. The Third Infantry saluting battery, placed on the Ellipse, will fire a 21-gun salute as the President approaches the reviewing stand.

Admiral Asks $150,000 In Air Crash Suit

Rear Admiral Lucian A. Moebus, 1537 Mount Eagle pl., Alexandria, in a damage suit filed yesterday in District Court, asked $150,000 for injuries he said he suffered in an Eastern Airlines plane crash.

The admiral, in the suit, said he "suffered serious permanent injuries" as a result of the crash of a DC-3 on January 13, 1948, near Oxon Hill, Md.

Five persons were killed and Moebus was among four injured in the plane which was en route to Washington from Atlanta.

The suit charges that safety altitude rules were violated.

Tired, "All-In"—Listless Feeling Brought To Halt

As Vibrant Energy is Released To Every Muscle, Fibre, Cell

Do you get up in the mornings still tired, feel down-and-out all day? Have you checked-up on your blood strength lately? Overwork, undue worry, cold, flu or other illness often wears down the red-blood-cells.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that 888 Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the 888 Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, 888 Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on 888 Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. 888 Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Mitchum, Two Others Found Guilty in Marijuana Case

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

". . . didn't bother to defend themselves"

Hollywood, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Actor Robert Mitchum and two codefendants were found guilty on a charge of conspiracy to possess marijuana today after they refused a jury trial and didn't even bother to defend themselves.

The sleepy-eyed movie idol, Starlet Lila Leeds and realtor Robin Ford threw themselves on the mercy of the court and were ordered by Superior Judge Clement D. Nye to appear for sentencing February 9.

At that time, however, Mitchum, Miss Leeds and Ford face a second count, of actually puffing a "reefer" in Miss Leeds' hillside cottage September 1.

The sentence on either count may be for 90 days to a year in the county jail, three years in the State Penitentiary or a $5000 fine.

Jerry Giesler, Mitchum's famed criminal attorney who pulled the surprise move for the defense, said he would ask for probation on the conspiracy count. If Mitchum is found guilty on the other count, he cannot ask for probation.

Deputy District Attorney Adolph Alexander said if Mitchum is sentenced on conspiracy, the other "customarily" would be dismissed. If he's released on probation, the prosecution will decide whether to prosecute on the other count.

Dancer Vickie Evans, who was arrested with the other three, didn't even show up for the trial. She wired from New York she didn't have the cash for a train ticket to Hollywood, and forfeited her bail. A bench warrant was issued for her arest.

Ihlder Seeks New Definition Of Low Cost Housing Eligibles

A new definition of those eligible for the low rent public housing proposed for the District was asked by John Ihlder, executive officer of the National Capital Housing Authority, at a public hearing held in the District Building yesterday.

Those eligible should be defined as "persons or families whose incomes are too low to cause private enterprise to build an adequate supply of proper dwellings for their use," he said.

The hearing on the definition, termed "futile" by District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young, was required by the District Redevelopment Act of 1945.

Land Never Acquired

Under this act, Congress created the Redevelopment Land Agency to acquire slum area property which would be resold to private and public builders for low rent housing. While authorizing 20 million dollars for land purchase, Congress failed to appropriate the funds and the land has never been acquired.

Ihlder's definition would compare with the act's requirement that the proposed housing should be open to families whose income is in the lower 20 per cent of the city's population. The Census Bureau reported that the lower 20 per cent of District families have incomes of less than $2310.

Ihlder said the arbitrary figure should be eliminated because it might rule out from public housing families who are unable to obtain private housing even though their income is higher.

John Nolen, jr., director of planning for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, also pointed out that the present definition would not take into account the need for more costly housing for larger families.

Mrs. Frances Adams, vice president of the Washington Chapter, Americans for Democratic Action, supported Ihlder's proposal, terming the $2310 figure "not equitable."

However, Clarence W. Gosnell, president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, said that the lack of progress in the provision of low rent housing cannot be said to be caused by the definition. He recommended no change, and said his association is satisfied with the $2310 figure, which is subject to revision according to the cost of living.

Similarly in favor of the present 20 per cent definition were speakers for the Federation of Citizens Associations, Building Owners and Managers Association and the Washington Real Estate Board.

Time Again

Apparently the attention of the Eighty-first Congress is to be diverted, as in the case of its predecessors, to the picayune question of what time is to be observed in the District of Columbia. Representative O'Hara already has introduced a bill to make standard time mandatory in each of the national time zones. Senator McGrath has countered with a repetition of the bill he has sponsored for two years past to give the District Commissioners permanent authority to order daylight-saving time in Washington each summer.

There is no reason for another battle on this subject. The matter would have been settled definitely but for the shortsightedness of the last House in modifying the McGrath plan and limiting daylight saving to one summer only after a delay that messed up time schedules generally. Certainly this is an issue of primary concern to residents of the Washington area. It has no conceivable relation to the habits of Middle Western farmers or the personal preferences of Congressmen. If the new Congress truly is more liberal-minded, it ought to extend this trivial right to Washington by passing the McGrath bill promptly without harangue or amendment.

Air Force Needs

Despite the strong advocacy of the so-called 70-air-group program contained in Air Secretary Symington's annual report there is no reason to believe that it indicates another end-run around the President's budget. Mr. Symington already has committed himself to the Administration's economy program. The apparent inconsistency between the President's budgetary recommendations and the first annual Air Force report lies in the anomalous timing of the report. The Symington report covers the fiscal year 1948, which ended last June 30. Yet it appeared after the report of the Secretary of Defense which covered the entire calendar year. Probably the sequence of service reports was arranged in this fashion to allow Secretary Forrestal first to present the over-all picture. But the effect is certainly anticlimatic.

Mr. Symington appropriately observes that the phrase "70-group plan" is "undescriptive." The important considerations are what the Air Force expansion contemplates: replacement of obsolescent aircraft, revitalized research and development, a long-range striking force and a healthy aircraft industry. How fast to proceed with all aspects of this program is essentially a political decision to be made by the President on the basis of all available economic and political knowledge. The essential consideration, in our opinion, is to maintain at least the present level of programming, for a positive cutback would be wasteful in that it would mean loss of skilled personnel and great delays in any future expansion.

We hope that Congress and interested groups outside the Air Force will take note of Mr. Symington's qualifications of the 70-group program. The important thing is not the arbitrary number of groups, but what is behind them. To seize again upon a catch-phrase, as was done in the last Congress, could be to distort the program completely out of balance with the remainder of the defense establishment. For there can be only one over-all defense policy, not a separate one for each service.

The Symington report is becomingly modest about such accomplishments as the penetration of the sonic barrier and the notable increases in bombing range. Instead, the major stress is on items of "unsatisfactory progress." Mr. Symington cites as of prime importance the provision for a radar "warning net" around the United States. Certainly nobody can dispute him, for without advance knowledge of attack, other defense preparations might prove useless. One other item seems to us of especial importance in a list of needs that includes more housing for Air Force personnel, increased supersonic and guided missile research and provision for a flow of trained officers from West Point and Annapolis. That is the need for long-range procurement authority to enable the Air Force to use appropriated funds until expended. The acquisition of new aircraft is a lengthy procedure, and the economy and efficiency of the program can be increased by eliminating the requirement for annual reappropriation of funds once they have been approved.

The immediately significant fact that emerges from a reading of the President's budget message is that the execution of his legislative program would increase budgetary expenditures for the next fiscal year by an estimated $1,700,000,000. If taxes remain at existing levels, this would result in a deficit of 873 million dollars. To fill the gap between income and outgo, provide for future contingencies, and reduce inflationary pressures, the President has asked for new tax legislation to raise an additional four billion dollars of revenue. His suggestions as to how the needed revenues should be obtained have already been set forth in his messages on the state of the Union and the economic report. They are sufficiently general to allow Congress considerable latitude in the choice of ways and means.

The President has become a convert to the belief that sound budgetary policy calls for surplus financing in periods of high prosperity, not simply for budget balance. But it will be far from easy to convince Congress that as a hedge against inflation taxes should be raised by several times the amount of the prospective deficit. Moreover, if, as some experts predict, a downturn in business activity and prices is imminent, tax increases designed to curb inflation would be "out the window."

However, the President indicates that budget surpluses are needed not only to fight inflation, but also to "provide an adequate basis for the future financing of present commitments." In other words, he wants to be prepared for a scale of expenditures that may prove to be considerably higher than the amount of budgeted estimates. For instance, no allowance is made in the budget for outlays for military supplies for western Europe and other countries. But the President says that the fact that additional funds for such purposes will be required emphasizes the "need for increased revenues in the years ahead." He points out, too, that the cost of the requested program of universal military training, for which he has made a tentative first-year cost estimate of 600 million dollars, may eventually cost two billion dollars annually when in full operation. Moreover, the estimate of national defense expenditures, put at slightly less than $14,300,000,000 in the next fiscal year, is more likely to be increased than reduced by Congress. In any case, the President concludes that somewhat higher expenditures for defense purposes are "likely in subsequent years."

To finance the liberalized system of social insurance recommended by the President, additions to payroll taxes are also required. The President accordingly asks Congress to advance the date for scheduled increases in old-age insurance levies. He also wants more extended coverage, which would bring in many more taxpayers, as well as additions to payroll taxes to inaugurate a system of health insurance. If these payroll taxes were included in regular budget receipts instead of being credited to trust funds, total Government receipts for the coming fiscal year would amount to about $45,300,000,000, exclusive of the new taxes asked for, instead of 41 billion dollars.

This expanded insurance program would not, at its inception, add to inflationary pressures. On the contrary, it would have an anti-inflationary effect because additions to payroll receipts next year would more than offset increases in benefit payments. Nevertheless, payroll levies increase the burdens of taxpayers and should be taken into account when new tax proposals are being considered by Congress.

After adjusting regular budgetary receipts and expenditures so as to present a fair picture of the actual cash receipts from the public and cash payments to the public, it appears that the public will turn over to the Government $47,400,000,000 in the fiscal year 1950—$1,500,000,000 more than the amount of Government payments to the public. This excess of cash receipts over outlays would act as a curb on inflation even if the regular budget showed a deficit of the size estimated. This cash budget surplus is limited and might disappear; it does not remove the necessity for balancing the regular budget and leaving something over for debt reduction. Nevertheless, it has a deflationary effect that may influence judgments as to the amount of new taxes needed to provide the President with a safe working margin for all purposes.

One Package

Shall Congress write a new law governing labor-management relations to take the place of the Taft-Hartley Act as soon as repeal of the latter measure becomes effective? Or shall the Taft-Hartley Act be repealed promptly, with complete restoration of the Wagner Act to be followed later in the session by amendment of that act in accord with the President's recommendations? These questions are bringing conflicting answers even from Administration circles. Senator Lucas, who is to be the new majority leader, and Representative Lesinski, chairman of the House Labor Committee, have come out for a "one-package" bill. Chairman Thomas of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare has introduced a repeal measure in line with organized labor's plea for the "two-package" formula.

President Truman did not indicate in his state-of-the-Union message what procedure he favors. He flatly asked for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and restoration of the Wagner Act with certain amendments, without saying anything about one package or two. Senator Lucas says, however, that the President favors a single bill, and there are cogent reasons for that approach.

One of these reasons is that the two-package plan would throw the National Labor Relations Board into a tizzy. That agency has been extensively reorganized under the T-H law. A simple repeal measure would shift it back into its original form. Then the final act might put it through a third metamorphosis. Responsible administration of the law is impossible under such circumstances. Before the NLRB undergoes any further operation, certainly it ought to know what its own future organization will be and what kind of law it will have to administer.

One other factor of enormous significance is the attitude of organized labor. When the Taft-Hartley Act was being formulated in response to a public demand that something be done to curb abuses in the labor movement, the leaders of both the CIO and AFL haughtily refused to give any cooperation in the framing of a suitable new law. Now these leaders are eager to have the T-H Act repealed; they can scarcely avoid cooperation in the shaping of a substitute measure. If the one-side Wagner Act were restored, however, organized labor could revert to its previous aloofness that led to the overly drastic T-H amendments to that measure.

A naked repeal bill, moreover, would leave the Administration helpless in the face of possible strikes tying up the whole national economy. For all his criticism of the Taft-Hartley Act, President Truman has made good use of its restraints upon strikes causing a national emergency. We do not think that the President, Congress or the people wish to be left with no safeguards at all against crises of this sort. Certainly the Taft-Hartley Act has given rise to no abuses that would justify such rash action. Before abandoning it the Congress and the country ought to know precisely what is to be put in its place.

Injustice In Tokyo

It is more and more evident to us that the good name of justice, let alone of the United States, has been compromised by the war criminal cases in Tokyo. Take, for example, the case of former Premier Koki Hirota, the only civilian among the seven who were hanged. The transcript of the trial of Hirota is not available, and, even if it were, we doubt whether many people would have the hardihood to go through it. But one or two of the high spots in the case against Hirota are convincing evidence that the true inwardness of the Japanese situation was not taken properly into account. Play has been made, for instance, of the fact that Hirota was a member of the Black Dragon Society; also, that he participated in the meeting of former Prime Ministers who decided to make war on the United States.

Now the Japanese are as much a nation of "joiners" as de Tocqueville says we are. The Black Dragon Society was one of many, many patriotic associations in which most Japanese politicians were enrolled. The name of the Black Dragon Society looks horrendous to foreigners, but, actually, it is simply the name of the Amur River, Amur in the Chinese rendering meaning Black Dragon. The society was named after the purpose for which it was founded in 1901, viz, to advocate a Japanese advance to the Amur River, then the frontier between Siberia and Manchuria. There is not the slightest reason so far as we know, to think that Hirota was anything more than a dues-paying member of a group that was sometimes perfervidly patriotic, sometimes merely social; depending on the occasion.

That Hirota was likewise one of the Prime Minister group which decided to make war on the United States means nothing more than that he "went along" with the Japanese militarists. The war was a militarists' war; more specifically, the army gang's. Certainly Hirota's part was a minor one compared to that of the army leaders. Gen. Sadao Araki was virtually military dictator of Japan in the year and a half after Japan's invasion of Manchuria in 1931. Then there was Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, Japanese Ambassador to Germany, who brought Japan into alliance with Germany. And, of course, General Tojo in the latter days played a dominant role. Among their civilian fellow travelers Hiranuma, Shiratori and Matsuoka were prominent, but none would suggest that Hirota was in their class as a chauvinist. To be sure, the council of former Premiers, which succeeded the Genro or Elder Statesmen, came out for war, but the council was a rubber-stamp body, and the decision was collective.

However, Hirota has been hanged, and nothing can be done about it. The effect on the occupation is not yet apparent, but, so far as we can make out, the execution of Hirota has left wonderment, if not resentment. Maybe one way of palliating this miscarriage of justice would be to cancel the seven-year sentence of Mamoru Shigemitsu, former Minister of Foreign Affairs. By no stretch of the imagination, as we have already insisted, could Shigemitsu be classified as a war criminal. He sought constantly to stave off war, and when he was unsuccessful, simply did his duty to his country. He it was who signed the surrender. An impressive weight of testimony has been assembled in behalf of Mr. Shigemitsu, including a joint telegram signed by such authorities and political leaders in England as Lords Hankey and Sempill, Mr. R. A. Butler, Mr. H. A. Gwynne, and Sir Edward Crowe. Therein Mr. Shigemitsu is called "a true friend of England who strove hard for peace." Surely there are enough Americans who knew Mr. Shigemitsu as a true friend of America to do the same thing.

Corporation Taxes

Representative Monroney's proposal for a graduated tax on corporate profits was criticized in your January 2 editorial as penalizing bigness without reference to ability to pay and as discriminating against low-income stockholders of large corporations.

These objections could be obviated by incorporating the graduated tax in the scheme advanced by the Committee for Economic Development to integrate the corporate income tax with that on individuals. Under the CED plan an individual stockholder would report as taxable income dividends received in cash plus an aliquot share of the tax paid by the corporation. If a corporation which earned $100,000 before taxes paid $40,000 income taxes and $30,000 cash dividends, a stockholder who received $60 cash would report $100 taxable income and claim a $40 credit against his total tax. The corporate income tax, in effect, would become a withholding levy upon subsequent dividends to stockholders.

The CED proposal would remedy the most objectionable features of the present unintegrated corporate income tax; that it bears most heavily on stockholders in low-income brackets and that it encourages uneconomic and wasteful corporate policies such as disproportionate debt financing and extravagant compensation to officers.

Although no stockholder would be penalized for investing in a large corporation if the proposed integrated corporate tax were graduated, a large corporation with ready access to the capital market would be less able than its smaller competitor to finance expansion by retaining earnings, thus slowing the alarming trend toward concentration of economic power.

Because a greater percentage of corporate profits would be declared as dividends and because profits retained by large corporations would be subject to higher rates, increased revenues could be expected from such a combination of the Monroney-CED proposals.

Confidence In Chiang

A commentator reports the "apparent" mood of the State Department as having "lost all confidence in Chiang Kai-shek, and all concerned would sigh with relief if he should step aside and allow others to sue for peace." At the same time, the officials responsible for this mood are reported to believe that nothing can stop the Communist military march across the whole of China.

Logically, then, this means that the officials concerned have gratuitously conceded total victory in China to the Communists, if they want to take it. Consistently, this also means that these officials have gratuitously conceded to the Communists the power to dictate to the Chinese people everywhere the terms of peace.

Consistent with this utterly pusillanimous mood, these same officials gratuitously discredit in advance the strongest obstacle to this miserable concession, namely, the resolute will of Chiang to continue the battle, notwithstanding his critical setbacks, until China can obtain a peace which the Communists shall not dominate.

If these same officials will study their map of China, as also the geographical history of Chiang's resistance of the Japanese, will they still fail to recognize that over 250 million Chinese remain in provinces of China which have witnessed no so-called "popular mass revolt" (to employ the euphemism of the propagandists of Chiang's entire defeat) and in which Chiang can nourish his resistance?

Consumer Investment

To avoid a punitive excess profits tax, concerted propaganda is being spread favoring the use of the extraordinarily high tax-free profits made during 1948 for enlarging plants and production facilities, ostensibly for the public benefit.

Individuals who deny themselves and invest the money saved are well entitled to claim a fair return. But it is not immediately apparent that they are also entitled to claim unearned enhancement of their holdings by reason of the plowing in of consumer-customer's money acquired by charging admittedly swollen prices during the postwar pinch.

The fact cannot be challenged that the consumer-customer is presently supplying gratis, the risk capital which, according to the propaganda, the corporations find it difficult to obtain through financial channels. Instead of receiving stocks as compensation, however, we can expect after the plants are enlarged and sales increased that shares will be issued as dividends to the original stockholders. ALBERT A. Speculation Charges

As I listened to one of the popular radio news commentators recently, the following matter-of-fact statement was made in substance: About a year ago an investigation was made into the conduct of Federal officials who were using public information to further their private speculative activities in the grain and other commodities market, such as the President's physician, Dr. Graham. Well, the report of that select committee of the House on the Investigation of Commodity Transactions disclosed that there was no evidence that these charges were true.

I well recalled the vicious trial by smear that was conducted in the screaming headlines of newspapers and over the air waves by smug and sophisticated radio commentators who joined the newspapers in deerying the alleged perfidy of Government officials.

I well remember the hum of the cameras and recording machines when Republican Candidate Stassen and Republican Senator Ferguson were actively participating in the Republican inquisition. The deafening silence of this recording apparatus when Mr. Pauley, Senator Greene or Senator Tydings spoke is just as vivid in my memory.

If the Republican-dominated Investigating committee inquiring into the conduct of Government employes regarding commodity market speculation activities has seen fit to make a report exonerating these individuals of the charges preferred against them, the least that "the free press" can do to rebut the insinuations made against it is to accord the same degree of prominence to the exoneration of these men in their respective vehicles of expression as was given to the charges made against them. Religious Education In Virginia

In the fall of 1946 my daughter started school in Loudoun County, Va., and I became aware of, and objected to, the type of education labeled "religious" when she informed me that her parents were sinners. Upon questioning her, I learned that the basis for this idea was an unqualified statement from her religious education teacher to the effect that anyone who smoked a cigarette was a sinner.

From that time on I took a more active interest in the religious education classes and, after the Supreme Court decision in the McCollum case, I was invited to express my views at a closed meeting of the Loudoun County Committee on Religious Education. The meeting took place on April 22, 1948.

The subject of the constitutionality of the Virginia plan of religious education was discussed and only one member felt that a religious group should not place themselves in the position of "bucking" the Supreme Court. The clergy were of the opinion that nothing should deter their work short of a direct ruling from the Supreme Court. They admitted, however, that the Virginia plan was "probably" unconstitutional. The Episcopal clergyman stated that in the event the Virginia plan was challenged, it would probably take three years for a ruling from the Supreme Court and that a lot of work could be accomplished while they waited for a ruling.

Inasmuch as the committee was determined to continue the religious education classes, I made the suggestion that some changes in methods and material presented would be desirable. I pointed out that an effort should be made to get away from missionary work and conversion in the public schools and that that time be devoted to educating the children in the broader field of religion; i. e., teaching the Bible as history and acquainting the children with the various religions of the world, since religious beliefs form the basis of human conduct to a great extent and such facts would help our children to better understand the other peoples of the world and would, therefore, work constructively for peace.

This suggestion aroused the ire of the Episcopal minister who stated that he was a Christian, believed in Christianity alone, intended to continue teaching it, and did not care anything about any other religion.

The defenders of the Virginia plan of religious education contend that their work is not unconstitutional because the religious teachers are supervised by the office of the superintendent of schools and the public school teachers do not keep attendance records on children attending the religious classes. However, these classes are held in public school buildings, maintained by taxpayers' money, and have for students children who are present in the school building because the State law requires them to be there.

The public school teachers are paid from tax funds for the hour every week during which they cannot teach secular subjects. Out of 180 schools days there are approximately 36 days, or one in five, set aside for religious education. For each public school teacher so affected this is 36 hours. On the basis of the minimum salary of $1800 per year for teachers with a collegiate certificate, this amounts to approximately $50 per year per teacher. Multiplied by the number of teachers in the State so affected, it is obvious that religious education in the public school costs the taxpayer a considerable sum.

Unions By Persuasion

NO DECISION of the Supreme Court for many years has stirred so much discussion and controversy as that upholding laws adopted in Arizona, Nebraska and North Carolina outlawing the closed shop. Coming from a court labeled New Deal by bitter critics of the Roosevelt Administration, the decision caused tremendous surprise.

In a sober, careful opinion, Justice Hugo L. Black found that State Legislatures were entirely within their powers in passing laws specifying that an individual need not belong to a trade union in order to take a job. The only dissent came from Justice Frank Murphy, and that in the instance of the Arizona law.

Every union executive and organizer should read Justice Black's opinion and, equally important, the concurring opinion of Justice Felix Frankfurter. From Justice Frankfurter, who has been slurred more than anyone on the court by a smear bund, has come a penetrating analysis of the rights of the individual in relation to the power of mass organization. It throws a revealing light on the struggles of a society that seems to be moving toward greater and greater centralized authority.

Above all, for the leaders of the mass unions with their 16 million members, the Frankfurter opinion should cause soul searching. For the opinion raises the question whether with the great power that they now wield in American life the unions should rely upon the "power to compel rather than to persuade the allegiance of its reluctant members."

THE PLAIN TRUTH is that unions in this country, or most of them, have put far too much reliance on the force of law to build and hold their membership. Historically, you can see why this happened—against the background of the implacable resistance of the biggest employers to any unions at all.

But it is nevertheless the big weakness of American trade unionism. The prime example is John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers, which operates through the closed shop, the check-off and total domination from the top.

Trade union managers now have political power that 20 years ago no one in this country remotely dreamed of. President Truman has asked the Democratic Congress to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act and that probably will be done fairly early in the session.

Precisely here at this peak of power the union managers need to take a long look at the road by which they came to power. Power held by law can be revoked by law.

THE FRANKFURTER opinion quotes at some length from the late Justice Louis D. Brandeis, who feared and abhorred the power of coercion in mass wealth and mass organization. Justice Frankfurter quotes him as summing up his views on unionism as follows:

"It is not true that the 'success of a labor union necessarily means a perfect monopoly.' The union, in order to attain and preserve for its members industrial liberty, must be strong and stable. It need not include every member of the trade. Indeed, it is desirable for both the employer and the union that it should not.

"Absolute power leads to excesses and to weakness: Neither our character nor our intelligence can long bear the strain of unrestricted power. The union attains success when it reaches the ideal condition, and the ideal condition for a union is to be strong and stable, and yet to have in the trade outside its own ranks an appreciable number of men who are nonunionist.

"In any free community the diversity of character, of beliefs, of taste—indeed mere selfishness—will insure such a supply, if the enjoyment of this privilege of individualism is protected by law. Such a nucleus of unorganized labor will check the oppression by the union as the union checks oppressions by the employers."

Those words were written nearly 40 years ago. But Justice Brandeis was so remarkably foresighted that they might have been written yesterday to apply directly to our time.

Justice Frankfurter points out that in the two countries where industrial democracy is most advanced, Great Britain and Sweden, unions do not for the most part put their reliance on laws that guarantee the closed shop and the check-off. They have built their unions on the more democratic and the more difficult process of persuading the worker that both his self-interest and his idealism are served by uniting with his fellows.

No one but the most blind and the most biased should have been surprised by the court's decision. It is in the long tradition of American freedom and individualism.

Taft's Voting Record

Having followed procedures of the Eightieth Congress with some care, I cannot agree with the appraisal of Senate voting records, by Stewart Alsop, on January 3.

Senator Taft is a shrewd lawyer, with himself as client. And the client was a candidate for high office.

Both lawyer and client must have been aware that between liberal proposals and liberal action, there was a solid wall of Republican reaction in the lower house. Under the circumstances, any shrewd lawyer would counsel that his client lean heavily to the "liberal" side in both proposing and voting.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

From Marshall To Acheson

GENERAL Marshall has been Secretary of State for the critical two years during which the country had to get along with a Democratic Administration and a Republican Congress. President Truman's appointment of Marshall saved the country and the world from what could otherwise have brought about a irreparable disaster. It took the main issues of foreign policy out of the party struggle,—placing them, so to speak, in trust,—while the two parties squared off for the election of 1948.

Lippmann

General Marshall's great fame and his invulnerable reputation for disinterestedness averted the constitutional crisis which has followed other wars. But for him the struggle between the Truman Administration and the Eightieth Congress would have extended to foreign affairs. His appointment made it possible for the public-spirited leaders of both parties to collaborate. It made it politically dangerous (as the elections showed) for the partisan-minded not to collaborate.

Thus George Marshall rendered a service unique in modern American constitutional history.

EVEN IF his health had permitted him to continue, the election—provided it was decisive one way or the other—was bound to bring to an end the abnormal situation in which he performed his unique service. Had the Republicans won both the Presidency and the Congress, the Secretary of State would have been a Republican. Since the Democrats have won both, the Secretary of State was bound to be a Democrat. Fortunately he will be a thoroughly experienced public servant.

For the conduct of foreign affairs cannot long be confided to anyone who is not directly accountable to the President and through him to the people. In 1947-1948 the appointment of a great individual, quite outside the party system, was an indispensable expedient. But it was an artificial expedient—workable and desirable only in order to avert the paralysis of a divided government.

It is not healthy in the long run to treat foreign policy as something separate from the normal process of democratic government and of party responsibility. There are no statesmen wise enough, and no experts who are expert enough, to make decisions of life and death when they are artificially insulated from the give and take of general debate. An unavoidable result is to thrust excessive power upon men who are not accountable to Congress or to the people, who are often unknown to the public, who decide questions of great moment without having to explain or to justify their decisions, without themselves being aware of all the consequences and ramifications of what they decide.

A RETURN to the normal methods of government was certain to follow a decisive election. It has its obvious dangers. For while the Congress is now overwhelmingly committed to the idea of our responsibility as a great power, there are many unconverted and unreconstructed men left. There are many who lack the experience to debate freely, but responsibly, the great issues which must arise even among men who are agreed on our vital interests and our main purposes. But these are risks which must be taken and dealt with as they arise.

They will be dealt with best, it seems to me, if the system of bipartisan collaboration is gradually and judiciously transformed into one where a responsible Administration has to deal with a responsible opposition—both loyally committed to the same national purposes. Opposition is an organic part of our system of government. The function of opposition cannot be left on the one hand to the Wherrys and the Tabers, on the other to Henry Wallace. It needs to be performed by men like Vandenberg, Taft, Lodge, and Dulles. It should be performed by them as men whose public spirit is beyond argument—that is to say by putting them in full, current and immediate possession of all the information on which Administration policy is based. Though they should be consulted in advance, that should not imply that bipartisan compromises must be agreed to in advance, that the Administration may not make its own decisions, that they may not freely and openly criticize the decision.

THE bipartisan system of the past four years was necessary in the circumstances. But we need not regret that the circumstances have changed. Useful, indeed indispensable as it was, it had its grave disadvantages.

Can it really be said, for example, that Senator Vandenberg participated in the formation of our German policy—the crux of our whole European policy? He was often consulted, to be sure. But it is one thing to be consulted just before or just after some critical decision is taken; it is quite another thing to share the responsibility from the outset in all the steps which lead up to and may compel the decision. Yet the effect of the bipartisan system has been to prevent discussion and debate, indeed to prevent the American public from being adequately informed, on the momentous business of our German policy.

I for one do not think it safe or wise that what the American people know of the German situation should be so limited to what comes out of the official briefings in Berlin, Frankfurt, the State Department and the Pentagon, that there should be so great a discrepancy between the knowledge available to the general public and what the best informed insiders say to each other, or say off the record.

6 Seized on Boat in Florida; Smuggling 3 Aliens Charged

Miami, Fla., Jan. 10 (AP).—Three Jewish refugees—all former inmates of Nazi concentration camps—and three suspected smugglers were arrested at Marathon yesterday after a 28-hour watch by the border patrol.

Frank Hornyak, chief border patrol inspector, said the six were seized as they docked to refuel the 45-foot charter vessel, Semper Fidelis, in which they had come from Havana, Cuba.

Hornyak identified the aliens as Iancu Herscu, 26, his wife Milica, 22, of Romania, and Artur Woloski, 25, of Poland. He said Herscu and his wife had been inmates of the Buchenwald concentration camp, and Woloski had spent five years in four Nazi prisons.

Charged with attempting to smuggle aliens into this country illegaly, and conspiracy, were Albert Padags, 25, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Arthur J. Benson, 34, of Massachusetts, master of the boat, and Joseph Sowinski, 59, of Wisconsin, a crewman.

In Washington, Attorney General Tom Clark said there was "some indication that others in the United States are involved, and a full investigation is in progress."

Hornyak said the aliens were being questioned for a possible link with two German youths arrested here last week, who admitted an affiliation with the Communist Party.

Hornyak stated the German youths, who stowed away aboard an American-bound freighter, landed in New York, and made their way to West Palm Beach, Fla., before the border patrol caught them. They admitted under oath that members of the Communist Party gave them money, and helped to smuggle them into this country, Hornyak said.

The Jewish refugees were arrested about noon, when 11 border patrolmen swarmed over the charter boat.

Hornyak said a tip was received that the Semper Fidelis had sailed with the refugees aboard. Aircraft followed the boat, and reported its progress by radio to patrolmen in surface craft and automobiles.

World Bank Capital Held Adequate Now

John J. McCloy, president of the World Bank, said yesterday he sees no need now for the Bank to raise additional lending capital.

He told a news conference the 478 million dollars the bank has available for lending seems a "substantial" amount, especially since credits already extended are being used slowly.

Among new loans he described as shaping up toward action soon were:

One for not more than 15 million dollars to finance export of timber from Finland and Yugoslavia to Western European nations. McCloy said Czechoslovakia may come in on the loan, but Poland has dropped out.

Another, probably under 75 million dollars, to finance power development in Brazil by the Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Co., a concern which is largely Canadian-owned. McCloy said the Brazilian legislature has approved the project.

Most of McCloy's remarks to reporters, however, dealt with observations he made on a recent trip to Mexico, Guatemala, Honduras, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador and Panama.

He said he was impressed not only by needs in these countries but, also, and more emphatically, by the vast amount of enigneering and marketing studies which will be required before these countries can submit loan applications of a "bankable" quality.

He said, however, that Central American leaders to whom he talked had been "modest" in their concepts of loan requirements and that they are "not coming forward with big projects."

He said they stressed needs for agricultural developments, but other needs include power development, roads and the like.

The World Bank, meanwhile, announced that it is sending missions to four of its member countries: India, Turkey, Colombia and Peru.

A mission headed by A. S. G. Hoar, assistant loan director, will leave for India Wednesday. It will make an appraisal of the economic and financial situation in India, with special reference to railway and agricultural projects which have been suggested by the government for the Bank's consideration as the basis for a possible Bank loan. Other members of the mission are Joseph Rucinski and Eric Beecroft of the loan department; Antonin Basch and William M. Gilmartin of the economic department; a railway technician and possibly an agricultural expert will join them later.

A mission comprised of G. Stewart Mason and William Diamond of the loan department and E. Harrison Clark of the economic department left Washington for Turkey January 7 to assist in the selection of projects which might be suitable for Bank financing.

Milo B. Williams, an irrigation engineer, has been loaned to the Bank by the Food and Agriculture Organization, to study Peru's irrigation program and assist in the formulation of a national water and land reclamation program.

David W. Smyser of the loan department and J. T. Lund of the economic department arrived in Bogota on December 30 to investigate the possibilities of financing specific projects which have been submitted to the Bank for its consideration. These include three power plants, a soda ash factory, and an agricultural machinery project.

McGrath Aid In Equality Fight Seen

Selection of Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) to head the new District Committee makes elimination of segregation here "very hopeful," Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Democratic national committeewoman from the District, said last night.

Mrs. Harriman spoke on "The Meaning of Democracy in 1949" at a dinner of the Interchurch Fellowship of Washington in All Souls' Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw.

She praised Senator McGrath and added that as a close friend of President Truman he would be likely to carry out the President's policies on civil rights.

At the same time, Mrs. Harriman expressed as her personal belief that "some individuals have gone at the question too hard, and have stirred up antagonism that otherwise might not have been there."

The former Minister to Norway declared that elimination of segregation on a national basis requires education in a great many instances, and will have to be accomplished on a gradual basis.

On the question of democracy, she said we must think in global terms.

"Jefferson and Lincoln were not thinking for America alone," she said, "and Bresident Truman's civil rights stand is not a domestic issue, but a pattern for all nations where color is a problem."

Truman Visits Leahy At Naval Hospital

President Truman late yesterday visited his chief of staff, Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, who is recuperating at the United States Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., from an operation.

Mr. Truman drove out to the hospital at dusk and spent nearly an hour with the admiral who is expected to retire shortly. Mr. Truman found Leahy in good spirits and apparently recovering well from the surgery he underwent late last week.

Mt. Pleasant Citizens Study Property Plan

Refusing to indorse the real estate option plan devised by former Federation of Citizens Associations President Clifford H. Newell, the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association last night accepted for further study an alternate plan proposed by its own committee.

The committee reported at the meeting held in the Mount Pleasant Library, 16th and Lamont sts. nw., that the Newell Plan might be considered impracticable and of doubtful legality.

Newell's plan calls for giving of purchase options by residents of a block which may be exercised by other residents when the property is put up for sale to prevent purchase by unacceptable buyers.

The committee's alternate plan recommends a voluntary "gentlemen's agreement" by property owners not to "sell, transfer or lease property or any part thereof to any person or persons other than those of the Caucasian race."

The agreement provides that every property owner who signs would agree to inform the citizens association of any attempts of non-Caucasians to purchase, acquire or lease any property in the area.

Questions by members brought the answer that although the term "caucasian" is not clearly defined even in the dictionary, it is one commonly used in such real estate agreements.

It was brought out that the agreement, if entered into, would not be recorded with the recorder of deeds and would not be binding on any other than signers.

The agreement would be made "in good faith for the mutual protection of our real estate investment and the character of our community," it was contended in the preamble.

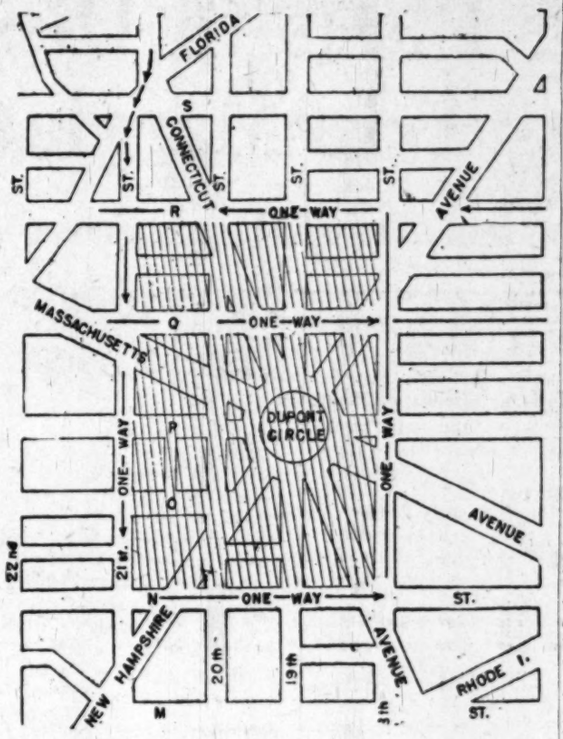
Delegate-at-Large

The Lincoln Park Citizens Association last night opposed the move now before the Federation of Citizens Associations to confer at-large-delegate privileges on former federation presidents.

The association met at Epworth Methodist Church, 13th st. and North Carolina ave. ne.

The group also asked the director of highways to improve parking strips between sidewalks and streets in the neighborhood. It was pointed that the ground level has sunk below the sidewalks in many instances causing water to remain after rains.

A New Traffic Bottleneck . . .



LONG WAY AROUND—Twentieth st. nw. from A st. south to N st. will be added to the list of streets closed to through traffic after 9:30 a. m. Thursday because of Dupont Circle construction work. The section of 20th st. from Massachusetts ave. nw. south will still be open to through traffic, but its use for that purpose is officially discouraged. Twenty-first st. will become one way south bound. The reason: Construction north of the circle on Connecticut ave. will prevent traffic from entering 20th st. from that thoroughfare

School Board System Upheld By Civic Body

A resolution calling for legislation to empower the County Council to select school board members was defeated last night by the Montgomery County Civic Federation by a 35-31 vote.

The federation in November favored legislation for an elected school board instead of the present system of appointments by the Governor.

At that time, the bill was being promoted by the County Parent-Teachers Association Council.

The meeting, held at Bethesda Elementary School, was attended by delegates from more than 60 affiliated associations.

A resolution favoring legislation to permit sale of mixed drinks in clubhouses of veterans' organizations in Montgomery County was defeated by three votes.

A favorable report on introduction of the bill was made by Maurice McCarthy, chairman of the federation's legislation and legal action committee.

The proposal, however, was finally voted down, 41 to 38.

Health Is Theme Of Dr. Pate's Talk

The Southwest Health Center is attempting to "bring health to the people rather than the people to health," Dr. Charles V. Pate, director of the center, last night told the Southwest Civic Association at a meeting at Randall Junior High School, 1st and I sts. sw.

Following the meeting, members of the association toured the new 16-room addition to Randall Junior High School which was occupied for the first time yesterday.

Topping Plans to Dissolve New York's Football Yanks; Hoyas Trip Maryland on Corley's Last-Second Shot, 53-51

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

TOM YAWKEY, who for 16 years has been big league baseball's fastest man with a buck, has surrendered to the maxim that you can't buy a pennant. He has filed away his check-book and told his Red Sox front-office staff to get resourceful and develop some ball players in their minor league chain; he isn't laying it on the line any more.

POVICH

It isn't quite true that the Red Sox haven't turned up a pennant winner for Yawkey, they did get home in front in 1947, but Owner Yawkey apparently does not consider one pennant every 16 years a healthy average. His conversion to the breed-'em-not-buy-'em school was clinched when the Red Sox didn't win last season's pennant.

Like a lot of other baseball men, Yawkey thought he had the 1948 pennant bought when he paid over $420,000 to the Browns for Shortstop Vern Stephens and Pitchers Jack Kramer and Ellis Kinder. He also went into the $50,000 bracket to hire the genius of Joe McCarthy as manager, but the upshot was that the Red Sox didn't maintain their pennant pace of the season before.

Yawkey's new policy explains why the Red Sox were conspicuously absent from the bidding for Pitcher Jack Sanford of the Browns, whom the Yankees bought for $100,000. The Sox need pitchers no less than the Yanks but they made no move in Sanford's direction.

AND THE YANKEES' purchase of Sanford was something of a new departure for that club. Despite their eminence at or around the top of the league, the Yankees in the past decade have been no heavy buyers of talent. Until the Sanford deal, there wasn't a player on the Yankee club who carried a high purchase price. They came off Yankee farm clubs, mostly.

Joe Di Maggio and Tommy Henrich represented the Yankees' biggest cash investments and they were bought more than a decade ago. They picked up Di Maggio as a superlative bargain back in 1936 when they got him for a mere $25,000 after other clubs shied off from the Coast League sensation when their scouts reported a hazardous knee injury might keep Di Mag from the big leagues.

Henrich, the only other Yankee regular who wasn't a product of their farm system, was a shrewd buy by Ed Barrow who signed him as a free agent for a $20,000 bonus after the late Judge Landis discovered irregularities in the Cleveland Indians' handling of Henrich. Cleveland fumbled that one badly, attempting to cover Henrich up in the minor leagues to make room on their club for Roy Weatherly, another outfielder who never encountered the day when he could be rated with Henrich as a ball player.

YAWKEY CAN HARK back to his big disappointment after buying the Red Sox in the winter of 1932-33. He loaded up with Connie Mack's stars, Lefty Grove, Rube Walberg, Max Bishop, and Jimmy Foxx, and failed to achieve anything more than fourth place. After the 1934 season, he separated himself from $250,000 to buy Joe Cronin from Washington but his Red Sox couldn't get into the first division the next season.

Cleveland won the pennant last season, but Bill Veeck didn't buy it. In fact the only players he bought for any extravagant sums, John Berardino, Walt Judnich, Bob Munchief and Sam Zoldak from the Browns, were inconspicuous in the Indians' triumph. The men who made the Indians go were guys that had come up out of the Indians' farm system or had been obtained by Veeck via trades.

That whole Cleveland infield with the exception of Joe Gordon was farm-developed. First Baseman Eddie Robinson emerged from Cleveland's working agreement with Baltimore, Boudreau moved up from the Indians' Buffalo farm, and Ken Keltner came out of a Virginia league via the American Association. Gordon was obtained by Veeck in a swap with the Yankees, and his two top pitchers, Gene Bearden and Bob Lemon, were developed at Cleveland.

THE INCREASING UNIMPORTANCE of money in the scheme of building pennant winners is eloquently illustrated by the sad estate of the Detroit Tigers and the Chicago Cubs, the two richest teams in baseball. Phil Wrigley, owner of the Cubs, who would buy a pennant winner if he could, found himself saddled with all his dough and an eighth-place ball club.

Walter O. Briggs, jr., who is probably the richest club owner in the American League and blinks not a bit at paying the league's biggest salaries, has discovered that all his wealth can't buy him a good second baseman. For years the Tigers have stumbled along with Eddie Mayo, back-weary old-timer who goes neither to his right or left for any great distance. Mayo used to be one of the good ones but the Tigers can come up with no adequate replacement.

Yawkey's farm system last year produced for him Bill Goodman who did a smart job at first base, but the Red Sox may have to find another spot for the versatile Goodman next season. Because coming up from Birmingham is Walter Dropo, a .354 hitter who whacked nine home runs in the Southern Association play-offs. The Six started grooming him for first base in Fenway Park two years ago, and if he makes good, Yawkey can tell his front office hands, "See what I mean."

D. C. Jury Indicts 3 Men In GWU Bribery Case

presiding, the District grand jury returned these counts against the trio yesterday:

1. That they offered Shapiro $1000 on December 5 if he would attempt to lose the game with North Carolina State the following night.

2. That on the same date they offered Shapiro $10,000 to lose all the remaining games on the basketball schedule.

3. That on December 19 they offered Shapiro $1000 to throw the game with the University of Virginia the following night.

Although most of the games involved were scheduled out of town, it was brought out yesterday that the District law makes it an offense which may be prosecuted here to try to bribe an athlete no matter where the game is played or to be played.

Details of the alleged gambling plot, which was believed to have involved "throwing" of some games and "fixing" scores in others, were disclosed by District Attorney Hogan in New York last Tuesday night following George Washington's upset 71-63 victory over Manhattan. The Colonials took the floor a 13-point underdog in the betting.

Mr. Hogan highly praised Shapiro, a 25-year-old Brooklyn law student, for his part in the affair. When first approached four months ago, Shapiro told the New York district attorney's office about the attempted bribe and, acting under instructions, continued his contacts with the men, all four of whom denied the charges.

Gotham authorities waited until the purported "fixers," with Shapiro volunteering as bait to collect evidence, contacted the player in New York regarding the Manhattan game before placing them under arrest.

In New York, the four men were indicted on charges relating to bribery of a participant in amateur or professional sports and on a conspiracy count. The former is a felony and could bring imprisonment from one to five years and a fine of $10,000.

Terps Prove Surprisingly Hard to Beat

By Sy Fishbein
Post Reporter

After fingering the ball blithely for a full 24 seconds, calm and deadly Ray Corley sent in a long, last-second set shot to hand his Georgetown Hoyas a 53-51 victory over a surprisingly tough Maryland quintet last night at the National Guard Armory.

It was an appropriate climax for the little Hoya captain, who after being limited to 4 points in the first half, burst forth with a flurry of deadly set shots to keep the Hoyas from dropping out of sight in the last half.

The crowd of 737, tensed for a fast break by the Hoyas after Terp Ronnie Siegust's foul shot tied the game at 51-51 with 30 seconds to go, screamed for action as Corley worked the ball up slowly into Terp territory.

When he got to about 10 feet to left of the foul circle, Corley stopped still as his bench ticked off the seconds for him.

Fifth Win in Eight Games

Not even trying to fake his guard Bernie Smith, Corley simply waited. Suddenly he tensed, Smith lunged, the ball arched through the cords and the whistle marking the Hoyas' fifth victory in eight starts ended the struggle.

For Coach Flucie Stewart and his Terps, there was no shame in their eighth defeat. The canny Terp coach shook up his team for the important inter-city clash, benching his captain, John Edwards.

For most of the second half, the strategy looked like a master stroke as the Terps stayed out in front from the second minute until the eighteenth.

Stewart assigned Bob Murray to handle the bothersome Hoya sophomore, 6 foot 5 inch John Mazziotta, and Frank Armsworthy to guard the other potent Hoya pointgetter, Tommy O'Keefe.

Armsworthy held O'Keefe to an innocuous eight points while Murray shackled his charge effectively until the closing minutes of the game when Mazziotta delivered two important field goals.

Ronnie Siegust Gets Hot

Murray, who acted as the Terps' mealticket in the first half, was himself stopped almost cold in the second, unable to do better than two free throws. But his teammate, Ronnie Siegust got hotter than Testudo in a summer sun when Murray cooled off, and drove the Terps from a 27-25 halftime deficit quickly into a 30-28 lead as the second half got under way.

Siegust kept hitting with jumping one-handers and by the time eight minutes of the final half had gone by, Maryland was enjoying an amazing 41-34 lead.

Here, after the Hoyas had gone scoreless for five minutes, Corley's set shots started dropping through and the Hoyas were on their way.

Helped by two layups by Mazziotta, Corley finally overhauled the Terps at the 12-minute mark with another long one.

The Terps pulled away again but the Hoyas kept within a point, until with three minutes left to go, Mazziotta laid one in and sent the Hoyas ahead 51-50. Then a Terp free throw tied it at 51-51 to arrange the scenery for Corley's winning shot.

Corley's late spurt gave him the game's scoring honors with 17 points. He was trailed by Maziotta with 14, while Murray and Siegust were the big Terp guns with 13 and 12 points each.

George Barclay kept his reputation as an unbeaten coach when his Maryland frosh whipped the Hoya yearlings, 56-45, in a preliminary to the varsity clash. Barclay's reputation was aided immensely by Dick Koffenberger who threw in 18 points to dominate the game's scoring. Walt Nigrelli led the young Hoyas with 10 points.

WHAT'S THIS ALL ABOUT?—The boys apparently have their sports confused in this picture of last night's Maryland-Georgetown game at the Armory. Dick Taylor (24) of Maryland, with uplifted hand, gesticulates like a referee ruling that the man on the floor, Vincent Leddy of Georgetown, certainly is down if not out. Maryland's big Bob Murray makes off with the ball. Georgetown's John Mazziotta (center) apparently wonders what it's all about. At the left are Maryland's Lee Brawley and Georgetown's Tommy O'Keefe. Georgetown won, 53-51

Paper Says Demise Due January 19

By Bob Cooke
New York Herald Tribune News Service

New York, Jan. 10.—The first factual indication that the All-America Football Conference will not be represented at the Yankee Stadium next fall was uncovered today when it was learned exclusively from an authoritative source that Dan Topping, president of the New York Yankees, plans to dissolve his football team.

Topping, weary of the burden of severe losses at the gate, will drop his gridiron interests and become a landlord instead. According to the source, Topping wil rent the Yankee Stadium to the Boston Yanks, a National Football League team, in 1949.

The official announcement regarding the demise of the Yankee football forces is expected during the major league football meetings at Chicago, January 19.

Official Family Not Talking

Although no one in the Yankee office was willing to confirm Topping's desire to terminate his football program, it is common knowledge that the Yankee family is in favor of this policy.

Last week Red Patterson, public relations chief, admitted that the Yankees were looking for peace, above all else. Quoting Topping, Patterson said:

"We would be perfectly willing to get out of football and act as a lessee if that would help matters."

The fact that the Boston Yanks will transfer their franchise to New York next fall has already been announced. Ted Collins, the Boston owner, obtained permission from the National League to do this late last month.

Despite the fact that the Yankees continue to sign players, as in the case of Barney Poole today, there is no reason to doubt that Topping will go through with his intentions.

The Yankees, who have been operating for three years in the A. A. C., jumped from the National League in 1946 for $100,000 and other concessions, including numerous players.

With the Yankee's no longer represented in the AAC, the impending meetings of both leagues in Chicago will no doubt inspire a new order in pro football.

For dissolving his team, Topping naturally can expect certain compromises from the National League owners in behalf of his AAC associates.

It is the considered opinion among professional football people that the two leagues can amalgamate in a happy manner if the case of the Baltimore Colts can be settled.

Baltimore is the lone remaining Eastern team in the AAC which would like to continue operating under present conditions. If the magnates can satisfy the colt owners in some manner, peace may yet reign in major league football.

It's a Matter of Bringing Peace to Pros

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—A spokesman for the New York Football Yankees said tonight the club would be willing to withdraw from the All-America Conference if it would "bring about peace in pro football."

Red Patterson, publicity chief for the Yankees, made the statement after the Herald Tribune reported it had learned from an authoritative source that Dan Topping planned to dissolve the Yankee team.

Patterson said: "We have repeatedly stated that we are willing to do anything to bring about peace in pro football. This would even include becoming a landlord at Yankee Stadium.

"However, we do not intend to withdraw from the All-America Conference if we leave a lot of other clubs holding the bag. If no peace is possible, we are not going to back down for one moment.

Caps Win 26th In Dull Boston Game, 94-83

Boston, Jan. 10.—The Washington Caps made it 26 victories in 31 starts for their Basketball Association of America record to date by committing a slight case of homicide on the Boston Celtics, 94 to 83, here tonight.

In a game which almost put 4061 fans to sleep in Boston Garden, the league-leading Washington quintet took over the lead midway through the second quarter and held it in margins ranging from 20 points to the final figures of 11 points difference throughout the dull tilt.

Fred Scolari led the victors' scoring with 21 points, scored by every conceivable court method and divided proportionately over the course of the four quarters of play. Sonny Hermzberg hit with a series of amazing set shots, measuring almost half the distance of the court during the third period, to settle for a 10-point personal total. Bones McKinney also hit for 10 points before he joined his team mate, Cleggie Hermsen, in exile for six personal fouls during the last period.

Boston had four men in the double digit department, headed by Eddie Ehlers with 14 points. Tom Kelly, Celtic forward, scored 12 of his 13-point total during the final period and it was he mainly who cut the final score to its deceiving 11-point margin.

The Celtics did manage to take the lead at 21 to 19 during the course of the first period, but when the scoreboard read 28 all midway through the second quarter the caps went into their act. John Norlander led the way at this point until the half time count was 41 to 33 in favor of Washington.

The Caps took 102 shots from the floor as against 114 for the Celtics and their free throw record was 26 out of 36 as compared to Boston's 21 out of 41 tries.

Browns Beat Skins to W & M's Star Center Tommy Thompson

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Tommy Thompson, William and Mary center who was the Washington Redskins No. 2 draft choice in 1947, slipped from the eager grasp of the Skins yesterday.

It was announced that the All-Southern Conference lineman had signed a one-year contract with the Cleveland Browns of the rival All-American Conference.

Thompson was signed to a Brown contract by Dick Gallagher, a former W. and M. assistant coach now serving in that capacity with Cleveland.

President George Marshall of the Redskins found out about it last Saturday, he said. That was when Thompson, two teammates who are also Redskin draftees, Halfback Pat Haggerty and End Lou Haitsma, and W. and M. Coach Rube McCray attended the Touchdown Club banquet as Marshall's guests at $15 a plate.

That also was when a year of patient, but futile waiting came to an end. The Redskins had failed to draft another center this year, depending on the 22-year-old 215-pounder to eventually take over the job shared last year by Al Demao and Clyde Ehrhardt.

Disappointment ran almost as high with the Redskins as the feeling that "something was wrong."

Washington was said to have an inside track for Thompson's services,

W & L Defeats Virginia, 75-66

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 10. Washington and Lee, winner only once in six previous games, surprised Virginia tonight by dropping in shots from all angles for a 75-66 victory.

Fred Vinson, jr., son of the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, played an important role in W. & L.'s victory by working the floor expertly. His feeding to teammates for baskets and defensive work were outstanding.

Jay Handlan of W. & L. was the night's leading scorer with 25 points to 22 for Joe Noertker of Virginia.

After trailing by 38-25 at halftime, Virginia closed the gap to 40-33, but W. & L. pulled away, once holding a lead of 55-36.

Archie Scores KO

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 10 (AP).—Archie Moore of St. Louis knocked out Clarence (Alabama Kid) Reeves of Columbus, Ohio, at 2 minutes of th efourth round tonight in the final match of a boxing program at the Arena.

Blackwood KOs Wright

Joe Blackwood scored an impressive technical knockout over Al Wright in 51 seconds of the second round in the feature event at Turner's Arena last night.

Blackwood, 163, from Boston and Providence, sent his opponent to the canvas early in the first round before finishing him with a series of solid left jabs in the second.

The Boston boy first came into prominence here last November when he whipped Ken Stribling.

A crowd of 656 paid $1,417.62 to witness the card.

In the preliminaries, Bobby Paige, a 135-pounder from Washington, scored an impressive technical knockout over Emmett Harris, 151, also of Washington in 1:09 of the first round. Paige sent Harris to the eanvas twice before the referee stopped the encounter.

In other bouts Joe Flood, 173, Washington TKO'd Jesse James, 171, Washington, in 1:42 of the second round; Little Dynamite, 130, Washington, decisioned Cy Remond, 133, Washington, in four rounds, and Kid Wolfe, 166, Washington, decisioned Sidney Miller, 167, New York City, five rounds.

Tom Longboat, Running Ace, Dies

Brantford, Ontario, Jan. 10 (U.P.). Funeral service will be held at the Onondaga tribal long house near here tomorrow for one of Canada's greatest runners—the legendary Tom Longboat.

The 61-year-old athlete died last night on the Oshweken Reservation.

The famed marathoner sprang into prominence in 1906, winning the Hamilton 19 miles-around-the-bay road race. The following year he set a new record in the Boston Marathon, and entered the 1908 Olympics a heavy favorite to carry off honors for Canada. But Longboat developed a sunstroke while far out in the lead, and was forced to drop out.

Unpredictable Colonials Win On Early Rush

Special to The Post

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 10—The unpredictable basketball forces of George Washington University of Washington, D. C., chalked up one of their biggest upsets of the season here tonight as they romped over North Carolina University, 64-41, in a Southern Conference battle.

It was the second time in 10 games that the Tar Heels tasted defeat, their only other setback coming at the hands of New York University last week in Madison Square Garden.

The Colonials, with an up-and-down record, took the lead after 50 seconds of play and never turned it loose. In the first 10 minutes they clicked on 10 out of 14 shots from the floor, at one point sinking seven straight two-pointers.

After 16 minutes G.W. led, 26-13, and at halftime it was still 34-22 favoring the invaders.

Game honors went easily to G. W.'s Bill Contwell, who poured 21 points through the cords as the Colonials hung up a shooting average of .457 against Carolina's .276.

Dave Shapiro, the Colonial who figured in the recent bribery case in New York, turned in one of his best performances as he tallied 11 points.

If He Graduates in Spring

7-Yr. College Vet Barney Poole Will Sign With AAC Yankees

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—George (Barney) Poole, All-America end at Mississippi, has agreed to sign a three-year contract with the New York Yankees of the All-America Football Conference after his graduation from college next spring, Yankee club officials announced today.

The younger brother of Jim and Ray Poole who starred with the rival New York Giants of the National Football League, was recommended by Bruiser Kinard.

Kinard a great football player in his own right, currently doubles as assistant coach of Ole Miss and scout for the Yankees.

Poole is a veteran of seven years of college and one year of service football. The Giants had the NFL draft rights to him.

A star end at West Point for three seasons, Poole in 1947 returned to Mississippi, where he began his college career back in 1941.

After two years at Ole Miss, he joined the Marines and played a season of football while stationed at a North Carolina Marine base in 1943.

The 6-foot 3-inch 220-pound athlete was accepted by West Point in 1944 and starred at end for the Cadets for three seasons, during which time the West Pointers wenet unbeaten.

He returned to Mississippi in 1947 and climaxed a brilliant career by being named to the Associated Press' All-America team last season. He is 25 years old.

Bevens Takes His Hard Luck to Chicago

Radio Beats Gun, Spoils Story Of His Coming to White Sox

By Red Smith

Copyright, 1949, N. Y. Herald Tribune

New York, Jan. 10.—The Yankees had won the first two World Series games easily but the Dodgers expunged Bobo Newsome early in the third and Hugh Casey arrived in time to preserve the last fragment of Brooklyn's lead. So New York was ahead, two games to one, on the afternoon of October 3, 1947, when Bill Bevens started pitching against Harry Taylor.

Something very, very peculiar happened that day in Ebbets Field. There's been other World Series pitchers who fell only this far short of no-hit games—Claude Passeau and Monte Pearson and Burleigh Grimes and a raft of others. But they all were sharp. They'd really been pitching. Big, moon-faced Bevens was coming up with the flabbiest, messiest no-hitter imaginable. In eight innings, he walked eight batters, one of whom scored on an infield out. But in eight innings, there wasn't a Brooklyn hit.

In the ninth inning, two more Dodgers walked. The first was Carl Furillo, and Al Gionfriddo stole second. Reisler, lame and unable to play in the outfield, was a pinch-batter. He had taken a baleful cut at Bevens' first pitch, missed, and almost fell when his weight came down on his bad leg. He seemed scarcely able to stand, let alone get a hit.

But first base was open and Bucky Harris had more respect for Reiser than for the unwritten law against putting the winning run on base. (The Yankees led, 2 to 1, with one more put-out needed.) The manager instructed Bevens to walk Reiser purposely. Eddie Miksis went in as a runner.

Cookie Lavagetto, batting for Ed Stanky, hit the right-field wall for two bases and the ball game. Gionfriddo and Miksis fled home, the score was 3 to 2, and the World Series was all square.

There are some things it is impossible to forget. Things like the scene that developed when the unbelieving crowd at last came to realize what had happened. Lavagetto, running in from second base, had met Bevens near the mound and flung an arm about the pitcher's shoulders and they hustled toward the dugout together.

The other Dodgers were running for Lavagetto, too, along with a half-dozen ushers. And there were three cops and a host of Brooklyn citizens in the group, but they weren't holding off the crowd; they were scrambling over one another to get at Cookie, to claw at him, and pummel his back or, at least, touch the hem on his playsuit.

Afterward, for upward of half an hour, a knot of fans lingered in the right-field corner, worshiping the spot on the wall where Lavagetto's line drive had struck.

It was, maybe, the most memorable of all World Series scenes.

And now Bevens is gone. The Yankees sold him the other day to the White Sox on a trial basis.

Fate Proves Bitter: From 1-Hitter To Sore Armed Boy in Season

Lavagetto is gone, too, of course. The greatest Brooklyn hero of the series didn't even last in the majors until the next season. The Dodgers shipped him down to Oakland. For that reason, Reiser's gone, too, and Gionfriddo and Stanky.

After Bevens' one-hitter, Bevens pitched 2 2/3 innings in the same series and that was his end with the Yankees.

He had a sore shoulder last season and the Yanks sent him to Newark where he worked only eight innings. He is one of those guys who can't pitch except for the world championship. There've been others before him. There was a time when Marius Russo did almost no summer work for the Yankees, seldom showing up on the mound except to beat some National League club in the fall. Assorted ailments used to keep Monte Pearson largely idle between World Series, too, and of course there was the classic case of Howard Ehmke, who rested up all one summer to strike out 13 Cubs in the fall.

Bevens is so unlucky he couldn't even get a break when he was sold. Frank Lane, general manager of the White Sox, wanted big headlines on the deal so he announced it for release in the roomy Sunday papers. A Kansas City radio station broke the release date, so the story came out a day ahead of schedule and got only a few paragraphs in the crowded Saturday papers.

It was like what happened to Lou Gehrig, who would have basked in a much brighter glare of publicity than he did if almost all of his career hadn't been thrown in the spacious shadow of Babe Ruth.

One day Lou hit four home runs on consecutives times at bat in one game. Ever that wasn't enough to get him top billing. The biggest headlines that day read: "John McGraw Dies."

Mangrum Wins Open With 284

By Bob Myers

Los Angeles, Jan. 10 (AP).—Lloyd Mangrum launched golf's golden winter tour today with a victory in the $15,000 Los Angeles Open.

The 34-year-old former United States Open champion laced out a 1-under-par 70 for a 72-hole score of 284 to capture by 3 strokes this twenty-third edition of the Los Angeles Tourney. It was worth $2600 cast to him.

The win by Mangrum ended a two-year domination of the tournament by little Ben Hogan, who wound up with 292—a very un-Hoganlike tally. Hogan had a 275 last year.

Low amateur honors went to Frank Stranahan, the gifted muscle boy from Toledo, Ohio, and Bruce McCormick of Hollywood. They were tied with 295.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock, whose handsome 69 set the pace in the first round four days ago, closed with a 71 for 287 and second place money of $1900.

Tied 1 stroke behind Harrison were Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif.; Eric Monti of Santa Monica, Calif., Billy Nary of Albuquerque, N. Mex., whose 67 was low score today, and Leland Gibson of Kansas City, whose 67 yesterday under extremely bad weather conditions was perhaps the finest round of the tournament.

Sam Snead made a bid but grew as cold as the air around the Riviera Country Club and finished with a 73 for 289.

Mangrum, with rounds of 72, 66, 76, 70, blasted into coleadership with Monti at the midway mark Saturday, and was deadlocked starting out today with Monti, Demaret and Gibson.

Demaret had a card of 74, including a pair of sixes, Monti and Gibson 74s.

Mangraum shot a 76 in a hailstorm yesterday.

Worsham Ends Up With 76 for 301

Los Angeles, Jan. 10.—Washington, D. C.'s Lew Worsham posted a 76 here today ending up at 301. Worsham's previous rounds were 75—75—75. Otto Griener of Baltimore, also finished with 301, carding rounds of 74—73—79—75.

Landon Wins, 6-0

Landon opened its soccer season yesterday with a 6-0 victory over Priory on the latter's field. Ted Bledsoe kicked in two goals to lead the scoring. The victory was Landon's twenty-ninth in a row over a four-year span.

Anacostia, Central In Top Game Today

By Herb Heft

Post Reporter

Central's Vikings, still Interhigh title favorites despite their upset by Coolidge last Friday, face Anacostia in the second game of a doubleheader at the Armory today.

In the first game at 3:30 p. m., Western collides with Eastern. The twin bill highlights a lineup of 16 games today.

Anacostia and the rest of the league aren't taking Central's one-point licking last week too seriously. They remember that Central lost its opener last season, but went on to take the championship.

Central's slow starts both last season and this season are attributed to the same cause. Its basketball mainstays didn't start practice until three or four weeks after the other schools.

Jimmy Pantos, Franny Gleason, Bill Dunker and Terry Gregory, until the first week of December, were still with the football team which was headed for the District championship. The squads of the other schools reported for basketball practice during the first week in November.

Pantos, second ranking league scorer last season, was held to a mere seven points by Coolidge last Friday, and while his floor game was up to par, his shooting eye was noticeably off.

The Vikings are expected to snap back into the win column today. Anacosia beat Chamberlain in its Interhigh opener, but lost decisively to Western. Central mangled Bell in its league debut before losing to Coolidge.

The Western-Eastern game is a tossup. Eastern has been plotting a secret defense to stop the sharpshooting of Western's Bucky Poston, who posted 25 points in the Anacostia game. If the defense succeeds, Eastern should win. Eastern had an easy time over Roosevelt Friday.

Two of the area's top teams, Bethesda-Chevy Chase and George Washington of Alexandria face tests today. Bethesda travels to Bladensburg for a 3:30 p. m. tiff, while G. W. journeys to Charlottesville to tackle Lane in a Virginia Class A Conference scrap.

Nats Play Pirates In Hall of Fame Game June 13

The Nats have been invited to play at Cooperstown, N. Y., June 13, in baseball's annual celebration of the founding of the game's Hall of Fame.

Calvin Griffith, vice president, said last night that the Nats will play the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National League.

"This is the first time we have been invited to play in the Cooperstown game," Griffith said. "This game usually is played during the three-day layoff following the annual All-Star game in July, but this year it'll be in June in order to make it a bigger show."

Preakness Value Cut To $75,000

Baltimore, Jan. 10 (AP).—The purse for Pimlico's Preakness—one of the three racing features making up the triple crown—was cut from $100,000 to $75,000 added today.

In cutting $25,000 off the Preakness Purse, the Maryland Jockey club followed precedent set by officials of the Belmont Stakes last month. The Belmont, another gem in the triple crown, will also carry $75,000 added money this year instead of $100,000.

The other top 3-year-old event, the Kentucky Derby, apparently will continue its $100,000 added value. Churchill Downs directors, meetting last month, set that figure for the May 7 diamond jubilee race.

No date was named for the 1949 Preakness, but it probably will be run the latter part of May.

Original nominations for this year's classic at Pimlico closed in September, 1947. A second payment was due last August and the third and final is due this Saturday.

Supplementary entries close April 15 upon payment of a $1500 eligibility fee.

A spokesman for the Maryland Jockey Club said all other stakes on the Pimlico spring slate will remain the same.

Henry A. Parr 3d was reelected president and treasurer of the club and John O. Needles again was voted the post of secretary.

John K. Shaw, jr., long-time member of the board of directors, was named to succeed W. Wallace Lanahan, who died last August, as vice president.

Week's Schedule Heavy

G. W.'s McNiff Leads Scorers In Conference With 67 Points

Phil McNiff, George Washington's junior guard from Brooklyn, N. Y., continued to set the pace in the Southeren Conference individual scoring scramble.

Through Sunday McNiff had 67 points, 7 more than Freddie Anson, Virginia Military Institute's star guard. Chester Giermak, William and Mary center, was third with 59 points.

Conference quintets play their heaviest schedule against each other so far this season this week when 16 league contests are on the program.

The circuit's defending champion, North Carolina State, has returned from its long jaunt that took the Wolfpack from coast to coast and lasted for three weeks.

And the Pack, currently with one win in its only conference start, will dive right into family competition. The State squad, whose record is now seven victories and six losses, will tangle with Davidson at Charlotte, N. C., Tuesday night and with Duke at Durham, N. C., Saturday night.

William and Mary leads the conference race with three triumphs and no defeats. Duke and North Carolina are second with two wins each. State and Furman are tied for fourth with a single victory. All of the remainder of the 16 clubs have lost at least one time.

Nats' Baseball School Opens

Winter Garden, Fla., Jan. 10.—The Washington Nats baseball school opened here today with the majority of the 170 youngsters who paid in advance for their first two weeks on hand for the light opening workout.

The squad, carefully culled before applications were considered, runs more to height and weight than the squad of last year. Eddie Eynon, Nats secretary-treasurer, here for the opening, was especially encouraged by the looks of some of the catchers, a department in which most ball clubs of today are woefully weak.

First day's work consisted chiefly of lectures and pepper practice with Director George Myatt and Walter Masterson in charge of the infielders, Sherry Robertson handling the outfielders, "Handsome" Fitzgerald working with the catchers, and Sid Hudson and Pete Appleton drilling the pitchers.

Joe Haynes, taking it easy after an operation on the shoulder of his pitching arm, will help with the instructions later.

Lions, Rockets Play Tonight

The Philadelphia Rockets can drum up some company in the bleak confines of the American Hockey League's Eastern Division cellar if they can outscore the Washington Lions tonight in Uline Arena.

Two points separate the Eastern Division doormats. For Philadelphia, the prospects look fair. Although the Rockets haven't beaten much else, they've been world beaters against the fifth-place Lions this season, winning both times the teams have met.

More substantial advantage than the jinx accrues to the visitors from the banging up of two Lion forwards Sunday night in Buffalo. Dan Porteous, just rounding back into shape, had his left ankle reinjured again. And spunky little Davey McGuire had to be carried off the Buffalo ice with torn ligaments in his back. The Lions also lost, 5-3.

An old familiar face will skate in with the Rockets in the person of Larry Archambeault, a one-time mainstay of the Lion forward wall. Archambeault, traded for Harry Frost to Cleveland, was later sent to the Rockets in a straight cash deal.

Armstrong Tops Douglas, 45-35

Baltimore, Jan. 10—Armstrong High basketeers of Washington, D. C., turned in their third straight South Atlantic Conference victory here today in a 45-35 defeat of Douglas High.

Wilson A. C., Dupont Win in WBC League

Two games were played last night at the Georgetown branch of the Boys Club of Washington in the Senior House League. In the first game, Wilson AC waltzed to a 52-17 victory over the Junior Optimists with Tommy Leonard leading the scoring for Wilson with 12 points. In the second game, Dupont Club defeated May Hardware, 56-50.

Browns Sign Thompson

and Coach McCray's friendship for Marshall was expected to have considerable weight in bringing the rugged lineman to terms.

Of this action by Thompson, Marshall said last night:

"I do not know when or where Thompson signed with an All-Conference team, and I do not know how much he received for doing so, but I do think the NCAA (National College Athletic Association) could spend more time investigating this situation instead of talking about television and the free substitution rule."

Marshall's reference apparently was to rumors widespread in professional football circles for months that the All-America Conference was jumping the gun in signing some college players.

That the Redskins failed to get Thompson's name on a contract after the 1947 season, when he was drafted, was due to their observance of a National Football League agreement not to tamper with players who have college eligibility left.

A league ruling, however, makes it legal to draft a player whenever the class with which he started college graduates.

Thompson was actually the Redskins' third choice after the 1947 season, but their second choice in the regular draft. Alabama's Harry Gilmer, was a bonus selection and first pick in the regular draw was Fullback Lowell Tew, also of Alabama, who decided to sign with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

After announcing the signing of Thompson, Gallagher said that "Tommy will fit into our organization. He's the type of player we want and we regard him as the greatest college lineman in the country."

In addition to his salary, which was not announced, Thompson was reported to have received a "four figured bonus," for signing with the Browns.

Thompson's signing by Cleveland was news to McCray, the W. and M. mentor said late last night. He said his first intimation that his star had signed came from the school's publicity man.

In addition to Thompson, the Browns also plucked another Southern Conference star and announced the signing of North Carolina's Tackle Ted Hazelwood yesterday. He is a 24-year-old native of Frankfort, Ind.

Fairfax Board, Council Will Meet

The Falls Church City Council last night agreed to meet at 10 a. m. Friday with the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors to iron out jurisdictional problems which arose when Falls Church became a city last August 16.

Falls Church officials have said that the conference will be necessary before the city can file a "friendly suit" against the county asking return of control by Falls Church of its schools, now county-operated.

The city council will carry to the meeting a resolution asking Fairfax County officials for a formula to settle school costs between the two jurisdictions since the city was created.

At last night's council meeting City Treasurer James E. Ferguson reported that Falls Church tax receipts for December totaled $102,280—the first time in Falls Church history that receipts have topped $100,000.

English Folk Songs Prove Enchanting

By Paul Hume

Nemone Balfour, visiting the United States from England, sang quite bewitchingly last night in Phillips Gallery.

Accompanying herself on the lute, then on the Irish harp, and at times singing with no accompaniment at all, she demonstrated advantages folk singers have over artists of the concert-song and opera field. For when one accompanies himself in singing, there is a freedom in tempo, and in pitch, that enchants the hearer.

There is also a wonderful intimacy about the occasion when an artists sits down and talks with the audience about the songs on a program. Miss Balfour sang of the tragic death of Lady Jane Seymour; she sang of the young maiden who was completely weary of virginity; and she narrated the tale of a young Irish girl who was contemplating suicide.

There were happy songs, too, like the one about the little nightingale, written by Henry VIII for one of his many lights of love, and an archaic version of "Go 'Way From My Window," and a charming notion about luck being gone from the house when a man's away.

Evenings of folk songs draw consistently large groups of listeners whenever they come to town. Miss Balfour, in what is our nomination for the loveliest concert costume of the year, will be welcome whenever she returns. Her voice and manner, her wit and friendly air, make her songs that sweet pleasure music alone can afford.

Court Rules School Board Election Legal

Legality of Arlington County's present school board was upheld yesterday by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

The high court affirmed a declaratory judgment of the Arlington Circuit Court, which had sustained the validity of the election in which the present board was picked.

Suit to oust the new board was brought by the former appointed school board in December of 1947. That group claimed the new board's election was unconstitutional.

Prior to that election in November, 1947, all Arlington school boards had been appointed. Under an act of the Virginia General Assembly, Arlington residents voted in a referendum to elect boards in the future.

The old board claimed in its suit that the assembly in providing for the referendum, set up "local legislation" in violation of section 63 of the Virginia constitution.

The Supreme Court, in an opinion yesterday by Justice Abram P. Staples, held that the law under which the referendum was held is a general law, even though Arlington happens to be the only county now operating under it.

D.C. Area Chapters Set $924,000 Goal In Red Cross Drive

A goal of $924,000 has been set by the six Washington metropolitan area chapters of the Red Cross in their annual fund drive, which opens March 1. The Nation-wide goal is 60 million dollars.

H. Randolph Maddox, general campaign chairman, also announced after an executive committee meeting yesterday the appointment of John A. Reilly, president of Second National Bank, as chairman of special gifts; Corcoran Thom, jr., vice president Riggs National Bank, as chairman of the general business division, and Col. William E. Schooley, assistant vice president American Security Trust Co., for national corporations.

Woman Freed Of Murder Charge

Mrs. Elizabeth Mamie Johnson yesterday was found not guilty of the murder of Basil Duvall in Mitchellville, Md., last summer.

The verdict was announced after the jury deliberated 1 hour and 10 minutes at Prince Georges County Courthouse, Upper Marlboro, Md. The decision came from an 11-man jury after one of the jurors, Lawrence Lammers of Laurel, Md., became ill and was taken to Prince Georges County Hospital.

Mrs. Johnson was accused of the fatal shooting of Duvall on June 19 with a 16-gauge shotgun following an argument at Duvall's home, where she was employed as a housekeeper.

Chevy Chase Man Sentenced to Two Years for Assaulting Family Maid

A Chevy Chase, Md., young man termed a "psychopathic personality" by Judge Warren Browning, was sentenced to two years in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday for assaulting his family's maid.

Joseph A. Wagstaff, 23, of 5506 Grove st., was convicted of assault and battery in Bethesda Police Court.

The maid, Mrs. Frances Tolson, testified the youth tore her dress and lunged at her with a kitchen knife with such force that the knife's blade was bent double against a kitchen sink when she sidestepped.

The attack took place in the Wagstaff home December 15 after the youth "flew into a rage" when members of his family refused his request for money, Mrs. Tolson testified.

The youth, who served a 30-day jail sentence in 1947 for destroying private property, and who, police say, has a record of at least two previous assault convictions, told Judge Browning he did not recall the attack.

Judge Browning agreed with Defense Counsel Robert Beall's contention that Wagstaff was mentally ill and expressed regret that Maryland lacks adequate institutions for phychopathic care.

This New Coffee Flavor Makes Early Morning Angels

It turns Bears into Dears...it's a wonderful, wonderful spirit-lifting success

A steaming, fragrant cup of this heavenly new Chase & Sanborn Coffee will bring out the "angel" in any man! "What's in it?" people ask!

The answer is Selecciones (pronounced seleck-see-o-nays). That's the Spanish for selected . . . some coffees selected mainly for perfecting body . . . others selected mainly for perfecting flavor. Yes, the flavor coffees in this mouth-watering new blend are hand-selected 1,—2,—three times!

1. Hand-selected from shade-grown, pedigreed trees.
2. Hand-selected at the peak of ripeness.
3. Hand-selected before and after curing.

No wonder it's so delicious. Try it! If you don't think it's the best coffee you ever tasted, just send us the unused portion and we'll give you double your money back. Get your pound today! (It's vacuum-packed, of course.) And long live your houseful of early morning angels!

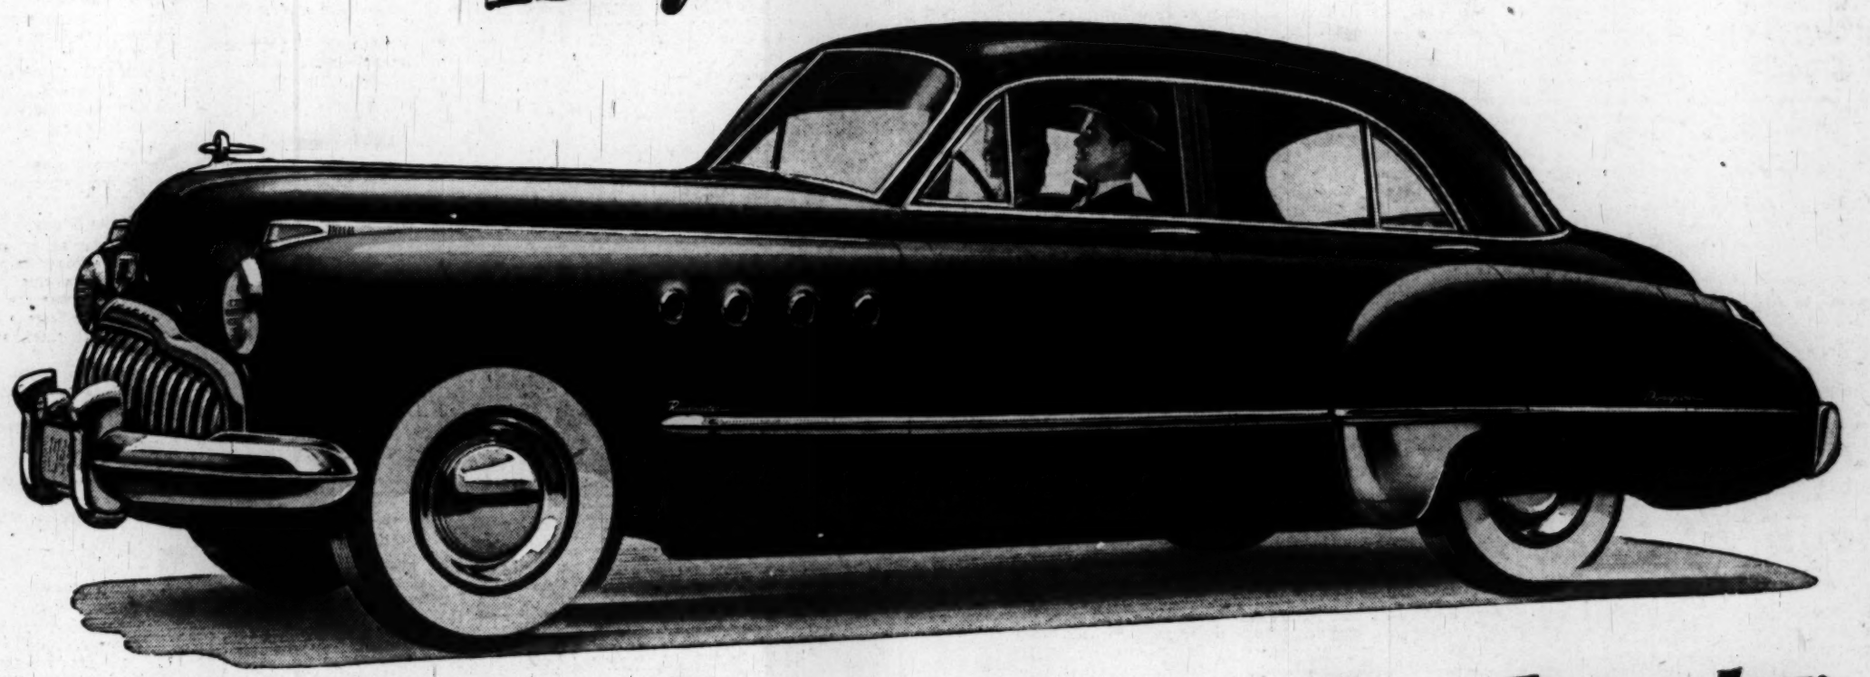
Want the Liveliest Run for your money?



'TISN'T often, these days, that you hear value mentioned in the same breath with bigness and fine finish and automotive luxury.

But talk to owners of the Buick ROADMASTER, and you'll find one of the major reasons for choosing this handsome carriage is its downright dollar value.

As a fine car should be, it's big and roadwise and steady; we'll match its level-striding riding qualities with anything else on the highway.

It's a dream to handle, with Dynaflow Drive standard on all body-types, and all normal gearshifting eliminated by a completely fluid transmission.

It's richly finished, with special custom trim available if you want a special added touch of smartness and luxury.

But the big thing about it is its power. More power, perhaps, than necessity demands—but enough to make you perfect master of hill and highway, of short, fast stretch and long, far-ranging journey.

So much power, indeed, that practically nowhere outside the lowest priced field will you find so much per dollar—and nothing there gives you a livelier run for your money.

Go look at the ROADMASTER for 1949. Let your Buick dealer point out all it has to offer. Then—check the price tags.

You'll get your order in just as a matter of making your dollars do greatest duty.

President Requests Funds for 20,000 More Federal Workers

Funds to add upward of 20,000 additional full-time Federal workers were recommended yesterday by the President in his record peacetime budget. In his budget message, the President called on Congress to:

1. Revise the salary-fixing Classification Act to permit the payment of "more realistic" salaries to career employes, and to correct the dislocation and inequities created in recent years in the salary structure;

2. To promptly enact the bill to raise the salaries of Federal executives and to give retroactive pay of $330 each to foreign service and District government employes:

(The Senate Civil Service Committee will meet at 2:30 p.m. today to act on the bill to provide pay raises for executives and foreign service and calssified District employes. In the House, Chairman Murray of the Civil Service Committee, put in a bill that would limit pay raises to the President, Vice President, and the Speaker.)

3. To be more generous in providing benefits to employes who are injured on the job, and of making settlements with the families of employes who are killed in line of duty;

4. To create a new and self-supporting Government corporation to provide cafeteria and recreational services for Federal employes. Such an agency would take over these activities of Government Services, Inc. and other such organizations that operate on Government property.

5. To give him a million-dollar fund which he could use to improve the management of the Federal service, and,

6. To transfer the United States Employment Service and the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation from the Federal Security Agency to the Labor Department, and to transfer War Assets Administration to the Federal Works Agency.

The average number of Government employes during this fiscal year is estimated at 2,065,000. For the 1950 fiscal year, which begins on July 1, the average is expected to rise slowly to 2,085,000. Most of the increase would be in agencies outside of the Capital. The largest personnel shifts would be in these agencies:

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION would have funds for about 10,000 fewer jobs. In this city the VA staff would be sliced from 13,162 to 12,348. More than 9200 jobs would be wiped out in VA's many field offices, from 183,155 to 173,941. The President explained that VA was now in the wind-up stage on several programs to benefit veterans.

INTERNAL REVENUE would have enough money to hire 7000 additional employes during the 1950 fiscal year. In addition, the bureau is hiring 2000 more workers in this fiscal year. The new workers will check up on tax-dodgers. The entire revenue expansion will be in its field offices. In fact, at headquarters here, a program of decentralization of work is under way and the number of employes here will be whittled from 4925 to 4739 during the 1950 fiscal year.

ARMY ORDNANCE would be able to make the largest increase in personnel of any agency. Its 84,800-man field staff would be expanded to 97,160, but the staff here would remain unchanged. The field staff of the CHEMICAL CORPS would be increased from 6500 to 7800.

Deductions would be made in other Army activities. The finance staff would be cut from 33,000 to 31,000; the field Quartermaster force from 53,900 to 49,200, and Transportation from 43,700 to 38,400.

At the Pentagon, the only changes worth mentioning would be: the Secretary's office would be cut from 975 to 874; the Chief of Engineers would lose about 100 employes, and about 50 jobs would be abolished in the Adjutant General's Office.

AIR FORCES would increase its staff here from 2900 to 3300 and from 169,200 to 173,000 in the field.

CENSUS would get one of the largest increases in personnel proposed for this city. It would get 1800 new employes to handle the 1950 general population census. In addition, more people would be needed to supervise the housing census suggested by the President.

NAVY: The big change here would be in its Bureau of Ships whose field staff would be cut from 61,000 to 56,000, but the same agency here would have 500 more jobs at headquarters here. At the Naval Academy, the civilian staff would be cut from 1429 to 1291. The field staff of Supplies and Accounts would be trimmed 1400; that of Medicine and Surgery by 500, and Yards and Docks by 1600.

In this city, 30 more jobs would be available in the Secretary's office and 150 in the Bureau of Personnel.

DEFENSE: The Office of the Secretary of Defense would have 150 additional jobs, from 1500 to 1650.

LABOR: The Bureau of Labor Statistics would get funds for several hundred additional jobs under the President's budget.

INTERIOR: Reclamation would get the major increases in this department. Its office here would be increased from 354 to 372; regional offices from 232 to 412; the Denver office from 1982 to 2515, and project employes from 12,300 to 13,470. The Secretary's office would have 35 more jobs; Bonneville Power in Portland, 500 more jobs; the Bureau of Land Management would be cut 40 jobs here and go up about double that number in the field, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs would add about 100 people here.

JUSTICE: Its budget provides for 150 jobs here and about 750 more in the field. About 20 jobs would be cut from the administrative division here. No other important changes.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS would get about 300 more field jobs. No change here. Civil Aeronautics Board would have 50 more jobs here.

AGRICULTURE: Just about every agency in this department would have to make minor staff reductions. The total would be less than 1000 jobs. The only big increase would be for Commodity Credit's field force which would go from 1831 to 2516.

PAY: Back to Federal pay, the President actually left the problem of a general pay raise for all employes up to Congress. He simply ignored the question. However, he did tell Congress that "the Government and its employes should be assured that the salaries paid for positions at all levels are fair compensation for the work performed."

Revision of the Classification Act would provide small raises for most of the 900,000 classified workers. The average increase would be around $100.

In the House yesterday, Representative Lane (D., Mass.) introduced a bill to give classified and postal employes a flat $650 pay raise.

District Welfare Faults Assailed By Gerstenfeld

Caucus Acts

Lee Chosen Montgomery Council Head

Frederic P. Lee has been chosen president and J. Douglas Bradshaw secretary of Montgomery's new county council, it was announced last night.

They were named at a caucus of the county's seven council members elected last Thursday.

Their selection will be formalized, it was announced, as soon as the new council takes office, expected in about two weeks after official certification of the election.

Lee, an attorney who successfully defended the new charter in two court attacks, was elected a councilman-at-large in last week's election. Bradshaw, also an attorney and Takoma Park city corporation counsel, was elected from the county's Fifth Council District.

Lee Bradshaw

Bradshaw, who made the announcement of the caucus action, said Thomas C. Kelley, a third lawyer on the council, had been chosen for council president pro tempore.

Earlier yesterday, the council-elect issued a statement in which it assured county employes they have no fear of losing their jobs if they have served "loyally and efficiently."

Employes will be continued in their present jobs regardless of political beliefs, the statement said, provided they abide by a charter provision prohibiting future political activity.

The statement said the council plans to keep the county's present civil service system in effect until a new merit system, provided by the charter, can be inaugurated.

Member of Board Asserts D. C. Fails To Meet Even Its Legal Responsibility

Speaking as a "fledgling member" of the District Board of Public Welfare, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld yesterday declared the District fails to meet "even its legal responsibilities" to the needy.

Some of the failures are "startling," he told about 60 members of the new Family and Child Welfare Section, United Community Services, who held their first meeting yesterday at the YWCA, with Miss Cecil Lester Jones, chairman, presiding.

Rabbi Gerstenfeld listed as an "irresponsible" failure the fact that public assistance here is now based on the 1946 cost of living, and even that is reduced by 7 per cent because of limited funds, he pointed out.

Raymond F. Clapp, principal assistant director of the Welfare Board, said it would cost about $250,000 a year above present expenditures to remove the 7 per cent reduction, and $500,000 to $600,000 more to bring the welfare budgets up to current living costs.

"We refuse to help an unemployed person or his family if he is employable, regardless of whether he can find work or not," continued Rabbi Gerstenfeld. "We make absolutely no provision to buy special diets that doctors' prescriptions may demand, and we make no grant above $160 a month, no matter how great may be the need of large families."

Rabbi Gerstenfeld also said the board washes its hands of any responsibility to a needy family whose head fails to comply with a court order to support his family. Also cited was the fact that no help is given to a family waiting to be interviewed by a social worker, which may mean a period of three or four weeks, he said.

G. Howland Shaw, speaking as a member of the board of the Family Service Association, a United Community Services agency, said private agencies here are forced to supplement the inadequate assistance of public agencies and are thus unable to perform their true functions.

He said these functions are services of prevention and rehabilitation to the needy, and over-all community planning. When these are neglected because private agencies must supplement public assistance, a vicious circle is begun in which more cases arise and are pushed unto the public agencies, he declared.

CAA Chief's Wife, 2 Others Injured in Fire

Mrs. Delos W. Rentzel, wife of the Civil Aeronautics Administrator, a guest and a fireman were injured yesterday in a fire that gutted the Rentzels' Parkfairfax apartment.

The blaze, about 4 a. m., completely burned out the combination living-dining room of the two-story apartment.

Mrs. Rentzel, who guided both her young sons to safety, was burned slightly about the face, but was not hospitalized.

Whitfield D. Inness of National Island, Fla., a house guest, was admitted to Alexandria Hospital with cuts suffered when he broke out through a first-floor window. Fireman T. J. Patterson was cut on the hand by glass.

Neither of the Rentzel children, Lance, 5, and Delos, jr., 10, was hurt, nor was Mrs. Rentzel's brother, Francis Oster of Fort Worth, Tex., his wife, and son, Tyler, 2½, who also were house guests.

Inness, who was sleeping on a sofa, discovered the fire, Oster said. He called the others who were asleep in the three upstairs bedrooms, and then, unfamiliar with the door latches, he broke a living room window to escape.

Mrs. Rentzel guided both her children downstairs through the burning living room, Oster said, but Delos, jr., raced back upstairs, apparently in panic, and was finally saved when he jumped from the second story into the arms of his mother and a neighbor.

The Rentzels estimated damage to their personal belongings at $10,000. A Parkfairfax official said it will cost about $3000 to repair the apartment.

Assistant Fire Chief William M. Barbour, who directed the hour-and-a-half fight, said the fire apparently started in the living room sofa where Inness was sleeping. He had no explanation as to cause.

D. C. Air Force Man Killed in New Mexico

Roswell, N. Mex., Jan. 10. (AP).—One Walker Air Force Base soldier was killed and two others seriously injured in an auto-truck collision near here last night.

The dead man was identified by Air Force officials as Pfc. Maurice M. Sanford, 19, Washington, D. C., injured were Pfc. Wayne E. Stansberry, Dean, Iowa, and Pfc. Richard H. Fogelman, Lemont, Pa.

Court Appoints Attorneys to Protect Interests Of 3 Minors Named in Mrs. Patterson's Will

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

Mrs. Ann Bowie Smith and her children, Eleanor "Cissy" Patterson Smith, 15 months, and Darnell, 5 years, leave District Court

Court-appointed attorneys to protect the interests of three minors who benefit under the will of the late Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson were named yesterday.

To permit these attorneys to familiarize themselves with the contest over the $16,500,000 estate, District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff continued pretrial arguments in the case to Friday.

The minors are Eleanor "Cissy" Patterson Smith, 15 months, and Darnell Smith, 5, children of Mrs. Ann Bowie Smith, close friend and neighbor of the late publisher of the Washington Times-Herald, and Jerry Le Fort, 20, son of Mrs. Patterson's former chauffeur.

Attorneys for Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, Mrs. Patterson's daughter who launched the will fight, unsuccessfully, argued in District Court yesterday that the pretrial hearing should be postponed at least to January 28. The case is presently set to go to trial on January 18.

Attorney Harold A. Kertz said the "pretrial hearing will be premature," because some 40 persons named in the contested will or early wills have not yet indicated they received notice of the trial. And in addition, he said, no attorneys have been appointed for the minors.

Disagreeing, William E. Leahy, representing the will's executors who are defending that document's validity, said full legal time has been given for notification of interested parties.

Judge Holtzoff agreed with Leahy that any interested adults "should have appeared by now." Later, he named J. Edward Burroughs, jr., of 1625 K st. nw., to represent the Smith children, and John J. Carmody, of 821 15th st. nw., to represent young Le Fort as guardians "ad litem."

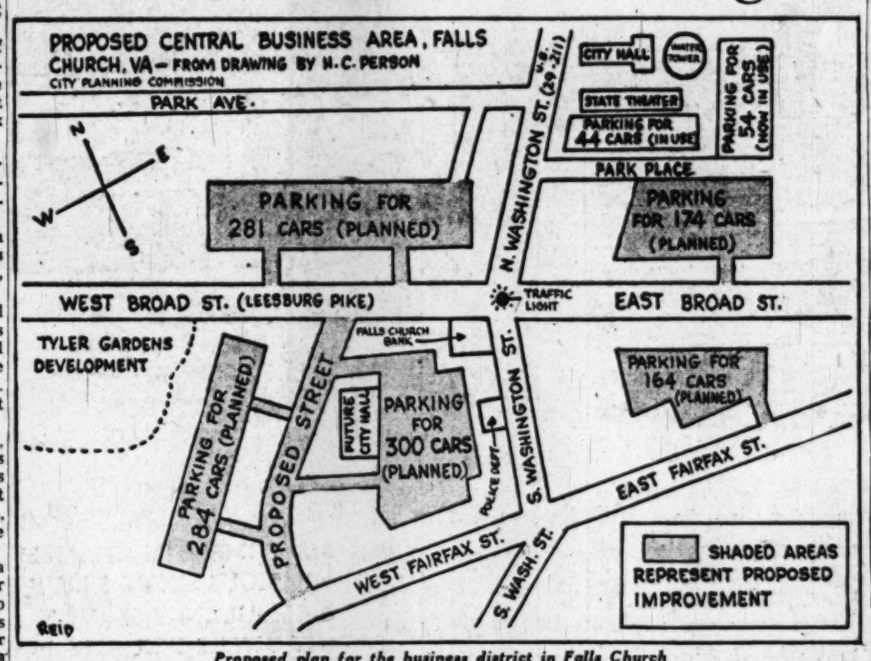
Mrs. Smith, mother of seven children, was present in the courtroom with "Cissy" and Darnell, but went to an anteroom when the youngest child began to cry.

Under the will, Mrs. Smith receives the Upper Marlboro Dower House estate, where Mrs. Patterson died, and $25,000 in five yearly payments, while Darnell is to receive that money if Mrs. Smith predeceases him. "Cissy" Smith is one of the will's 17 "secret" beneficiaries whose money bequests have never been detailed publicly.

Jerry Le Fort was named to receive $5000 in the will.

Mrs. Gizycka would receive $25,000 a year for life under her mother's will, but would not share in the Times-Herald, willed to seven executives. Her suit contends her mother was of "unsound mind" when she made the will.

New Business Areas Urged



Proposed plan for the business district in Falls Church

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

A proposal for four new central business areas in Falls Church—plus off-street parking for 1200 cars—was unwrapped last night by the Falls Church City Planning Commission.

Tentative plans for the project were revealed during a meeting of the Falls Church Chamber of Commerce, in a commission bid for support from city businessmen. The chamber asked for a full presentation from the commission at a later meeting.

The commission proposal, dormant for more than a year, this time came up four times the size of an initial central plan suggested in October, 1947, and dropped because of business opposition.

Under the new version, off-street parking and store space would be provided on all four quadrants of the city's main intersection at Washington and Broad sts.

The 1947 plan called for such facilities only on the southwest quadrant.

Figuring on a basis of 225 square feet needed for each automobile, the five off-street lots provided in the plan would occupy about 270,000 square feet of space, Edward C. Knouse, commission chairman, said.

According to Knouse, the central business area revision would relieve the present traffic and pedestrian "logjam" in downtown Falls Church and encourage new business to locate centrally.

Falls Church Mayor Albert M. Orme said the proposal would attract shoppers who now go to Arlington.

The plan calls for a 720-foot new street to be cut between West Broad and West Fairfax sts. Parking lots for 584 cars would flank it, and a new City Hall would be located midway along the new street.

Mayor Orme said space for the off-street parking lots and access roads could be provided in one of two ways:

1. By the developers, who have little or no access to their land. Orme said he felt the plan would enhance land values in the area.

2. The city might purchase the land for the parking lots, and assess merchants for the use of it.

The new plan now faces two hurdles, Knouse said: (1) It must overcome possible opposition from Falls Church businessmen, who would probably have to sacrifice some land for parking facilities, and (2) it must get the approval of the city council.

He said he hoped the Chamber of Commerce would agree to sell the plan to property owners on all four quadrants.

With business and council approval, Knouse said, the area plan "will become a part of the city's master zoning plan," and new builders "would have to recognize it."

Another hurdle, according to the Planning Commission chairman, is that "a lot of the property" involved in the plan "is not presently zoned for business."

This zoning would have to be changed, he said, to permit the new proposal to function.

The 1947 central business area plan was blocked by the then-town council, 4 to 3, after attorneys representing Property Owners Guy M. Church, Ernest Hinken and James E. Walters said they felt the Planning Commission was "trying to force the proposal upon them."

Police Accused Of 'Protecting' Keleher's Place

County, Mount Rainier Police Heads Deny Charge Made by Wife in Divorce Action; $30,000 Monthly Take Estimated

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

John B. Keleher operated a horse-race betting establishment netting him $30,000-a-month income under the protection of the Prince Georges County and Mount Rainier police, it was charged in District Court yesterday.

The accusations were made by Mrs. Anna T. Keleher, mink-coated estranged wife of the once-convicted gambler and by Mrs. Keleher's attorney, James J. Laughlin, during proceedings in which the former hopes to win a limited divorce. Keleher is also asking a limited divorce. Both sides claim cruelty.

[Commenting on the charges later, Maj. Ralph Brown, superintendent of Prince Georges County police said: "As far as I know he's never been protected. The place (3205 Rhode Island ave. ne.) has been closed for about the last year and a half, when we knocked off a number of places. I had men investigate the address today and they reported it closed."

Scoffs at Charge

[Chief Eugene B. Plumer of the Mount Rainier police also scoffed at the protection charge. "I don't even know Keleher," he asserted. "All I know is what I read in the papers. I never even heard of 3205 Rhode Island ave. ne. before but I'm going to investigate and I may start right now.]

Laughlin announced Sunday that testimony would reveal gambling phases in the county and said he'd wired Governor W. Preston Lane, jr., to send a representative to sit in at the trial.

Lane was not available for comment yesterday.

The first and only definite charges against Brown and Plumer voiced by Mrs. Keleher came in answer to a question by Laughlin:

"Was there a time in early 1948 when Brown and Plumer were mentioned in connection with 3205 Rhode Island ave. ne.?" (The address is across the District line in Maryland.)

Tells of Miami Call

"Yes, sir," replied the bespectacled, brunette witness, "Early in March 1948, I called Mr. Keleher at the Shoremeade Hotel, Miami . . . He said he'd been talking to the office in Washington (presumably the Rhode Island ave. address) and he said Pearson had been giving him the dickens for not taking care of Plumer and Brown the previous February."

Later Mrs. Keleher told reporters she meant to say Keleher had been giving the "dickens" to Pearson rather than vice versa. Pearson she identified as a George Pearson, whom she described as "key man" in the gambling establishment.

Earlier attempts at testimony linking the police officials with Keleher were blocked by Federal Judge Edward Tamm on relevancy grounds.

Brown's Name Brought Up

Laughlin started by asking the witness if she knew Ralph Brown.

"Yes, sir, he's chief of police at Hyattsville," was the answer.

"Do you know Eugene Plumer?"

"He's police chief at Mount Rainier."

"Do you recall if you have ever talked with Mr. Keleher with regard to Brown and Plumer?"

"Oh, yes sir. He used to talk with me about it."

"When was the first time you and Keleher talked about Brown?"

"About 1941."

"With relation to Mount Rainier?"

"Yes, sir."

"What was said?"

Here Alvin Newmyer, counsel for Keleher objected on the grounds that a conversation allegedly held in 1941 could have no bearing on the present divorce action filed in 1947.

Laughlin retorted: "We want to show that gambling operation is still going on with the full knowledge and boasts by Keleher that he had nothing to fear from Brown or Plumer."

Laughlin said he hoped by the questioning to establish the extent of Keleher's income.

Objection Sustained

The objection, however, was sustained by Federal Judge Edward Tamm as to the 1941 conversation. Tamm also upheld another Newmyer objection to similar testimony about conversations allegedly held in 1943, 1945 and 1946.

In an exchange between counsel, Laughlin asserted: "We expect to prove Keleher made great sums of money and that he could operate unmolested because he was protected by police."

But Newmyer was firm in declaring that whatever income his client had in past years had "no bearing on his present ability to provide for her (Mrs. Keleher).

Here Laughlin told the court: "We expect to show that gambling was going on full blast . . . and that his estimated income was in excess of $30,000 a month . . . up to and including last Monday the establishment has been controlled by Keleher . . . He is the power behind the throne . . ."

Judge Tamm once again upheld Newmyer's objection on the grounds of remoteness of time and the questioning was dropped.

Whatever business was conducted at 3205 Rhode Island ave. ne., it was done in an atmosphere of elegance, according to early testimony by Mrs. Keleher.

A Chinese rug carpeted the floor of the living room, which was also furnished with Chinese tapestry, a teakwood chair, three phones and "a loudspeaker coming through from the other apartment," she said.

Called Sales Agency

"Was the place called the Nelson Sales Agency?" Laughlin asked.

"Yes, that was just a phony name. They took bets on horses," Mrs. Keleher answered disdainfully.

Keleher Takes Stand

"What is your occupation?"

Chief Brown Chief Plumer

Laughlin demanded.

"I am retired."

"What was your last occupation?"

"I don't care to answer," Keleher replied in a cultivated voice. "It might tend to incriminate me.

"Have you any occupation?"

"No sir, I have not. I have an income of $1250-$1300 a month, $700 from United States Steel and $550 from 14th st. and Thomas Circle."

The witness explained he had an interest in a drug store and apartment property at that address.

"Have you ever been in 3205 Rhode Island ave. ne?"

"Yes sir, a little over a year ago."

"Were you there at all in 1948?"

"Possibly."

"Do you know George Pearson (previously mentioned by Mrs. Keleher as "keyman.")

"Very well."

"What does he do?"

"You'll have to ask him that," Keleher tartly retorted.

Ordered to Answer

Judge Tamm ordered the witness to answer and Keleher replied: "I don't know."

Under further questioning Keleher admitted Pearson worked for him "in 1947 answering telephones."

"Phones for what?" Laughlin snapped.

"I don't care to answer. It might tend to incriminate me," the witness replied coolly.

To other questions, Keleher denied knowing a John Nelson Warfield or a Charles Olive. (Earlier testimony had brought out that slips for electric power to the Mount Rainier apartment had been signed by "J. N. Warfield" as tenant.

At another point Keleher testified he "ceased connections" with the Mount Rainier establishment "about a year ago."

"How did you cease them?" Laughlin demanded.

"I just ceased them," the urbane Keleher answered. Under further prodding he said he notified "Mr. Pearson."

"Why did you tell Pearson?"

Keleher refused to answer on grounds of self-incrimination.

For the same reason he refused to answer questions as to the "size of the staff," bookkeeping and audit work.

He said he "had never heard" of the Nelson Sales Agency.

The case will be resumed today at 10 a. m.

Quarantine Imposed On Sorority House

A University of Maryland sorority house has been under "partial quarantine" since last Thursday, when a student's illness was diagnosed as scarlet fever, it was learned yesterday.

University physician, Dr. Harry A. Bishop, said the student, an 18-year-old girl, is in good condition at the university's hospital and has responded well to penicillin treatment. He said there was no danger of spread of the disease.

The sorority house, Kappa Kappa Gamma, 7407 Princeton ave., College Park, has been placed under partial quarantine for a minimum of seven days, Dr. Bishop said.

Under the quarantine, the 20-odd girls living there are permitted to attend classes, but cannot entertain visitors at the house or hold dances. In some of their classes, they are required to sit apart from other students.

Suggests Bridge Name

"Ohio Bridge" would be the name of the new twin highway linking the District and Virginia at 14th st. sw. under a House bill introduced yesterday by Walter B. Huber (D., Ohio).

Representative Carl Hinshaw (R., Calif.) introduced a bill to set up a Board of Registration for Professional Engineers in the District, and to regulate the profession. It was similar to a bill he sponsored in the last Congress.

Fined $100 for Assault

A 40-year-old woman was convicted yesterday of cutting the elbow of her 56-year-old mother with a scissors.

The defendant, Mrs. Lucille Colvin, 40, of 943 M st. nw., was given a $100 fine for the assault.

The mother, Mrs. Willie Allen, of the same address, testified in Municipal Court that on January 8 her daughter became angry when lectured to about drinking with men in the house. She at first threw a mirror at her mother and then used the scissors, the mother said.

2 Students in Finals

Two Montgomery County high school students have been entered by the Montgomery County Tuberculosis Association in the Maryland finals of a Nation-wide tuberculosis journalistic contest.

The two students are Bob Williams, of the staff of Silver Chips, Montgomery Blair High School newspaper, and Wallace Comegys, editor of Tide, the Richard Montgomery High School publication.

Winning Maryland entries will be entered in the National Tuberculosis Association-Columbia Scholastic Press Association national contest on articles, essays or cartoons on "What We Should Know About Tuberculosis" or "How Our Community Fights Tuberculosis."

Mildred Kuch Army Library Editor, Dies

Miss Mildred C. Kuch, 51, an editor in the Army Medical Library here, died Friday in Philadelphia following an illness of about a month.

Funeral services and burial will be in Peru, Ind.

Miss Kuch, who lived at 2511 Q st. nw., had been editor of the Current List of Medical Literature, weekly publication of the Army Medical Library, since November, 1947.

She had lived in the District for about five years, having come here to join the Office of Technical Services of the Department of Commerce. There she was subject cataloguer of declassified German material in medicine and chemistry.

A native of Farmer City, Ill., she received her A. B. degree from the University of Illinois and later did postgraduate work at the University of Chicago.

Miss Kuch later became medical and editorial research assistant in dermatology and syphilology to Dr. A. Benson Cannon, chief of the dermatology service of Vanderbilt Clinic, Columbia Presbyterian Center, New York.

She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Beatrice Conelley and Mrs. Pauline K. Sites, two brothers, Frederick W. Kuch and John J. Kuch, and a half brother, Dr. Carl Price Wagner of Seattle.

Lewis E. Reisner

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 10 (AP).—Lewis E. Reisner, 46, a former aviation figure, died last night.

Reisner, a stunt flier in his youth, was a native of Hagerstown, Md. He was one of the founders of the Kreidner-Reisner Aircraft Corporation, which later became the Fairchild Aircraft Corporation.

He was 57. His death occurred while on a business trip to the capital.

Heart Attack Is Fatal to Lee R. Warthen

Lee R. Warthen, 55, chief of the general art and design branch of the Army Institute of Pathology, died Sunday at his home in McLean, Va., following a heart attack.

An illustrator and designer, Mr. Warthen was born in Newark, Ohio, and was a graduate of the Columbus (Ohio) Art School. He attended the Art Students League and the Ferrer School of Art in New York City.

He first entered the Government service in 1935 as a museum preparator at Morristown, N. J., with the museum division of the National Park Service, Department of Interior, where he painted murals and illustrated scientific subjects.

In 1936 he was transferred to Washington to the studios of the Department of Interior in the old Ford Theater. In 1941 he worked for the Navy's Bureau of Yards and Docks, designing and developing camouflage studies for naval installations in the Pacific.

In 1937, he won the popular prize for his painting in the forty-sixth annual exhibition of Washington artists at the Corcoran Art Gallery and in 1947 won two awards for design of addition to the United States Naval Academy and Pensacola Naval Air Station.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ferol Sibley Warthen and a daughter, Sibyl, of McLean, Va.

It's the 'Feel of Things' That Counts in Gotham's New Spring Showings

By Peggy Preston

New York, N. Y., Jan. 10.—To know your fashion this season you'll have to learn the "touch system."

If you don't, you're going to be fooled. For what looks like chiffon velvet, actually is cotton velvet. It's water proof, at that, all ready to go swimming. Old-fashioned muslin can easily be mistaken for chiffon; and you'll have to have the talent of an FBI man to discover that what appears to be a tweed suit is actually made of tweed-textured linen.

MISS PRESTON

Fabrics, in fact, are the most surprising angle of this season's style picture. The Nation's fashion editors, attending the opening parley of the twelfth annual New York Dress Institute meeting here today, decided that feeling is believing. Modern science has played such tricks on ole man cotton that he'll never be the same again. And twentieth century inventiveness has had a telltale influence on taffeta, faille and others of the silk family. They're flexible and crisp, as light as tissue paper.

Looking over the collections of such trend-setters as Jane Derby, Maurice Renter, Tina Leser and Samuel Kass, we began to get the "feel of things."

Miss Leser, always on the whimsical side, showed some tantalizing beach and travel wear. There was a swim suit of white tablecloth linen, worn over blue satin panties; a surprising travel ensemble made up of a bare topped sundress with its own full-length redingote coat. Fabric is a linen-like homespun weave in shades of violet, and looks, for all the world, exactly like tweed.

She also makes patterned moire cottons into dance frocks, cotton taffeta to go to formal balls. Most interesting item in her collection, however, is a long dinner dress of paprika red linen-like weave, gold embroidered and worn with a matching serape over the head.

Over at the small, exclusive showroom of Jane Derby there were more surprises in the fabric line. Remember crepe de chine? Well, it's back again, recommended by Mrs. Derby for daylight and dark. From England she has imported another quaint and fragile fabric—mule. She puts yards and yards of this soft, sheer voile-like material into exquisite dinner dresses. Last year such costumes could have been done in nothing but the rarest of pure silks.

Anything goes in the combination line. How would you like a lush black satin suit, combined with a natural colored linen blouse? How about cotton pique banded with imported silk lace; natural shantung with leopard or, best yet, organza with mink?

These appear to be the latest whimsies on the fashion front, as viewed in the opening day's collections. Seems to this reporter that the smart woman will want to haunt the fabric departments of her local stores this year. It's going to be a season when the cloth, not the line, will be of first importance.

It is too early in the week to tell you exactly what the dominating silhouette will be for 1949. We noted some trends today, but will wait until we have looked over the line by French designer Jacques Fath tomorrow, to give you data on hemlines, shoulders, waistlines, etc.

Until Wednesday then, when we'll be back with more fashion facts from Manhattan.

Prices? Same as Last Year

IF YOU think he can bear up under the blow, tell friend husband your Easter costume will cost the same this year as it did last. Well, at least he should find comfort in the fact it won't cost any more.

That's what Eleanor Lambert, press director of the New York Dress Institute, told us at the opening forum yesterday morning.

"Prices are leveling off in various parts of the country," Miss Lambert pointed out. "But the over-all price range for clothing and accessories is not expected to change much this year."

Dress manufacturers are putting greater emphasis on medium and low-price lines, she stated, but added:

"You'll still have to pay a good price for a good dress."

Cruise Clothes Take Spotlight in Capital Shows

WHILE the fashion designers are unveiling their spring and summer wares in New York for the fashion press, Washingtonians are catching up on winter, spring and cruise clothes in stock in our own shops.

Both the Statler's Embassy Room and the Mayflower Lounge resumed their regular Monday style shows yesterday after a holiday hiatus and found enthusiastic crowds of women (and a few men) on hand for the two events.

Among the guests at the Statler luncheon were Lady Rama Rau, wife of the Ambassador of India, and Mrs. Kenneth Royall, wife of the Secretary of the Army, both at the celebrity table.

Mrs. Royall, wearing a red-brown suit with bronze beading and matching velvet hat, is just back from an 18,000-mile air tour of Europe with her husband, and a shorter hop to North Carolina for the Governor's inauguration. Yesterday, she was off again, for a visit in New York with her grandchildren.

Lady Rama Rau, beautiful in a soft orange sari with gold border, had some fashion news to report. She is hoping to present a fashion show of saris some day soon. And we may also expect soon Indian-inspired gowns from Designer Tina Leser, who is now en route to India after spending some time with the Rama Raus here.

AT THE Mayflower Lounge, Bab Lincoln was hostess to Mrs. Owen Brewster, Mrs. Karl Mundt, Mrs. Thurmond Chatham of Winston-Salem, N. C., and Miss Jackie Martin. Tidbits of table conversation was recorded for Miss Lincoln's Monday evening show on WOL.

Also present to see the clothes from Jelleff's — predominately cruise fashions—were Mrs. Nat Luttrell, Princess Halim of Egypt, Mrs. Kanode Llewellyn, Mrs. John Dwight Kendall, Mrs. George Sheay, Mrs. Harry Duncan, Mrs. Victor Johnston and Mrs. Walter Chamblin.

Mrs. George Holmes invited a group to join her and her house-guest, Mrs. Jane Kittell of Chicago, at the show yesterday; and there were men present, too. Prince Pignatelli played host at one table and Floyd Akers, Robert Rodenberg and H. Nelson Bliss were among those glimpsed taking a peek at the cruise fashions.

Inter-American Luncheon Held

MEMBERS and acting representatives on the Council of the Organization of American States were entertained at a luncheon yesterday by the chairman of the council and representative of Argentina, Ambassador Enrique V. Corominas. The luncheon was held at the Mayflower Hotel at 1 o'clock.

Guests were Ambassador Juan Felix Morales of Paraguay, Ambassador Ismael Gonzalez Arevalo of Guatemala, Ambassador Julian R. Caceres of Honduras, Ambassador Joaquin E. Salazar of the Dominican Republic, Ambassador Felix Nieto del Rio of Chile, Ambassador Silvio Villegas of Colombia, Ambassador Paul C. Daniels of the United States, Ambassador Jose A. Mora of Uruguay and Ambassador Mario Esquivel of Costa Rica.

Also, Ambassador Maria Bello of Brazil, Ambassador Hector David Castro of El Salvador, Ambassador Joseph D. Charles of Haiti, Ambassador Luis Quintanilla of Mexico, Ambassador Juan Bautista de Lavalle of Peru, Ambassador Rafael Ernest Lopez of Venezuela, Minister Counselor Jose T. Baron of Cuba, Dr. Enrique Kempff, acting representative of Bolivia, Dr. Oswaldo Garcia, acting representative of Ecuador, and Dr. Alfredo Sacasa, acting representative of Nicaragua.

The Secretary General of OAS, Dr. Alberto Lleras, was a guest as well as Dr. William Manger, assistant secretary general of the organization; Dr. Enfique Ferrer Vieyra, counselor to the delegation of the OAS, and Dr. Zobar Ramon de Campo, counselor to the delegation of the OAS.

Bonnets Hosts At Dinner Party

THE Ambassador of France and Mme. Bonnet entertained a group of their friends last evening at a dinner party in the Blue Room of the Shoreham. Les Compagnons de la Chanson, widely acclaimed troupe of young war veterans, appearing on the entertainment program, were the occasion of the Bonnet dinner party.

"The Nine Frenchmen," as they are sometimes called, are concluding a tour of the United States and will return soon to their native land. Their booking at the Shoreham is the last appearance of these Gallie wits prior to their departure for the Continent. The engagement is limited to one week.

Dinner guests of the Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet were the Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Belt, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippman, Mr. and Mrs. Andre Visson and a member of the embassy staff.

Other Dinner Parties

Other dinners at the Shoreham last evening were given by Dr. and Mrs. Ivy Pelzman, who had as their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle and Col. and Mrs. T. Smith; Mr. and Mrs. L. Gardner Monroe who entertained for Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Mack, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Blunck, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Clayton and Mr. and Mrs. Jay Carmody; and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reese of Egypt, house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Bretsch, who entertained for a company of eight.

Dinners were also given by Miss Grace Frysinger, Col. and Mrs. Frank Morrow Tyner.

Later in the evening many members of Capital society came to the Shoreham during the supper hour to see Les Champangnons de la Chanson. Capt. and Mrs. William H. Watson and Baron and Baroness Constantine de Stackelberg brought guests with them, following the dinner they attended given by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney C. Graves.

The Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de la Colina will entertain at dinner tomorrow night in the Blue Room of the Shoreham.

Supper Party

The junior group of the English Speaking Union will meet in the American Women's Newspaper Club, 1604 20th st. nw., on Thursday, January 13, at 6:30 p. m., for a bar and supper party.

And He Never Wears a Hat

Eli-Man Dean Acheson Noted Too for His Dahlias, Manor-Style Architecture

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

DEAN ACHESON was considerably riled the other day when a local gazette described him as a typical Harvard graduate. He's an ardent Eli and gives time to his alma mater by serving as a member of the Yale University Corporation.

In addition to his well known intellectual capabilities, impressive Mr. A. has a number of pleasant human foibles—he never wears a hat, is an amateur architect of recognized ability, possesses a "green thumb" and dotes on his dahlias; and is a special pushover for his baby granddaughter.

On the humorous side, he spins a nice series of stories about his law partner, Judge Covington, and stores a very fine collection of semi-unprintable jokes.

At Sandy Spring, Md., where the Achesons have a farm, Mr. Acheson achieved one of his greatest personal triumphs. He designed a wing for their charming old house. When the construction was completed, and the ensemble duly photographed, a picture was included in a collection of Maryland Manors and labeled (Acheson addition and all) as a very fine example of Seventeenth Century architecture!

The Achesons have a son, two daughters, all married. The farm has been sufficiently enlarged to include all for holiday visits. When not dallying with dahlias, working at law or being a companionable family man, handsome Mr. Acheson skips off fishing or, more rarely, camping in Canada.

He Prefer Franklin

THERE HAS BEEN so much front-page ruckus about Jay Franklin's "Life" article intimating a softening of President Truman's Soviet policy that a few facts about this disturbing scribe can't come amiss. A handsomely stern-profiled, fiftyish gent, his real name is John Franklin Carter. A collateral descendant of Benjamin Franklin, he chose his ancestor's name as literary pseudonym because the public associates it with the country's welfare. The name Carter, to John's way of thinking, has been far too closely linked with liver pills!

One of seven children, his father, the senior John Franklin Carter, was a minister who hailed from Orange, N. J., and for many years headed a parish in Williamstown, Mass.

John went to St. Mark's School, then Yale, starting writing almost as soon as he could hold a pen. A second cousin of "Alvie" Adie, who, at his death in 1923, had been Assistant Secretary of State for FORTY years. John Carter naturally gravitated toward the State Deuartment. He toiled in the western Europe division for 5 or 6 years, quite because he couldn't combine writing and State Department work.

However, his inventive mind found outlet in a series of detective yarns spun under the intriguing nom-de-plume of "Diplomat." The titles are ghoulish nifties, "Murder in the State Department," "Scandal in the Chancery," "Murder in the Embassy," "Death in the Senate," "Slow Death at Geneva," and most enchanting of all, "The Corpse on the White House Lawn."

Hush-Hush War Job

IN SERIOUS VEIN, the Jay Franklin books include a study of the TVA project, a biography of Fiorello LaGuardia, "Remaking America", "Conquest: America's Painless Imperialism," and last "The Catoctin Conversation."

During the war John Carter directed a very hush-hush office, handled confidential assignments for President Roosevelt. The assignments, for the most part, dealt in foreign political intelligence.

Carter was "invited" to assist with President Truman's campaign speeches, made two trips with the presidential train. His loyalty to the Truman program is 100 per cent and he's an admirer of Dean Acheson.

In private life John Franklin Carter lives in a handsome Massachusetts Avenue house with his attractive Canadian wife and two stepdaughters. He owns a farm at Lovettsville, Va., which is famous for its view rather than pedigreed produce. Carter claims there isn't a pumpkin on the place!

On his arrival at Princeton, the Ambassador was received by the president of the university. The Ambassador left last evening for New York City, where he will remain until the end of the week.

New Peruvian Envoy to Arrive In Capital Sunday

Fernando Berckemeyer, newly appointed Peruvian Ambassador to Washington, and his American-born wife, the former Miss Clara Belle Rapp of San Francisco, are expected in Washington on Sunday.

The Ambassador is a career diplomat. He served in various consular posts in this country, amongst others, as Consul General in San Francisco and in New York. Following that he was appointed as Minister Counsellor to London, where he acted as the Charge d'Affaires, and he later became the Peruvian Minister to Sweden.

He was made president of the Peruvian delegation to the Third General Assembly of the United Nations in Paris in 1948. His next position was as Ambassador to London previous to his present designation as Ambassador to Washington.

EAST AND WEST linked arms yesterday in friendly understanding at the American Newspaper Women's Club's tea honoring Siam's first feminine reporter and only woman publisher, Miss Prapasi Siriworasarn. In the group are (left to right) Miss Siriworasarn, Miss Grace McGerr, club president; Princess Waithayakon, wife of the Siamese Ambassador, and the Ambassador, Prince Wan Waithayakon.

Tea Honors Siam's Only Woman Publisher

By Genevieve Reynolds

Ten years ago a talented, attractive girl haunted the newspaper offices in Siam, insisting, "I want to be a reporter."

"It's no job for a woman," she was told repeatedly. But she persisted, landed a reportorial assignment, and became the first feminine journalist in her native land. After the war ended, she started her own paper, "The Nakorn Sarn Daily," became the first, and so far only, woman publisher, editor and co-owner of a Siamese newspaper.

Petite, dynamic Miss Parapaisi Siriworasarn remembered how difficult it was to get a start and staffed her paper with the "gentler sex." "We have only one man, to cover the bars, murders and gangsters," she explained yesterday wher she appeared as guest of honor at the American Newspaper Women's Club's tea, held in the clubhouse at 1604 20th st.

She came to the United States to gather material for a book on "The American Way of Life," and to study first hand the press of this country. The youthful-looking, 30-year-old reporter says that Siamese people are interested in everything about Ame ca. "Your jitterbug and boogiewoogie dances are very popular," she commented. "Before the war, English styles were our models. Now we take our styles from the United States."

Miss Siriworasarn, who wore a handsome native dress of purple and gold silk, topped with a black velvet tunic, confessed that she wore American clothes in Bangkok, and Siamese costumes in this country.

In Washington she is the guest of the Siamese Ambassador, Prince Wan Waithayakon and Princess Wan Waithayakon at the embassy.

On the Washington Club Front . . .

Indonesians want immediate independence and they desire to set up a government similar to that in the United States. But a majority of the 75 million population do not want the Dutch to pull out now. So declared Sayed Almassawa, journalist and representative of the Indonesian Federated States.

"We don't won't Netherlands colonization, but for the time being we need Dutch help," he told members of the Women's National Democratic Club in a luncheon address yesterday. "We need them to help keep law and order. If they should pull out now there would be increasing trouble with the Communists who have infiltrated into the Indonesian Republic."

The speaker said that the Republic Party has many Moscow-trained Communists in its ranks, but that it was not an all Communist Party. He listed Tan Malaka, Almin, Mdeso, Semaoden and Darsono as five of the most powerful Communists who lead the revolt against the Republic Party, along with Prime Minister Amir Sjarifuddin.

Almassawa said that 50 per cent of the Dutch army participating in the "police action" there now are native Indonesians.

Almassawa explained that the Committee of Good Offices, created by the U. N. to help settle the Indonesian question, did a very good job but that it did not have sufficient power to act.

"We hope this civil war will give quick independence to Indonesia and that we can set up a Federation of United States and gain admission to the U. N.," concluded the speaker.

Mrs. Norman Littell, program chairman, introduced the speaker, and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, club president presided. Mrs. Harriman announced an intensified drive to obtain life members of the club.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 19, Student at One of the Foremost Dramatic Art Playhouses, Is Concerned to Get Rid of Inhibitions; Mother Asks How

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter Julia, 19, is a student at one of the country's foremost dramatic art playhouses. She is dramatic, and is told that she has the requisite talent to become a great actress, as differentiated from a merely good one; but that she has one hindrance of large proportions. She is inhibited.

She is advised to analyze herself, to find if possible the root of her extremely inhibited nature. Short of psychiatric aid, which we cannot afford, can you advise us, or her, how to proceed?

In an effort to throw what light I can, I volunteered the idea that her inhibitions might hark back to parental complexes. However, Julia says that this sort of problem, she has been told, is strictly due to environment, not inheritance. What is your viewpoint on this?

Girl Insists She Must 'Break Out'

JULIA is popular, socially; but on that score she says, "It's purely superficial. I'm always compelling myself forward. I've got to break out of the wall of inhibition." Further, she tells me she doubts that her teachers believe she's trying to do anything about it, when as a matter of fact it's uppermost in her mind all the time.

I love reading your column and find much food for thought in your comments and advice; and I am hoping you may be able to shed light on our problem. G. S.

Is She Humbugged or Rationalizing?

DEAR G. S.: Either Julia is listening to some person's humbug, meant to delude and seduce her into wanton behavior; or she is giving ear to garbled greenhorn bohemian discourse; or she is snatching at wisps of psychiatric lore in order to plausibly justify a strong unconscious, self-engendered desire to dispense with civilized emotional control.

If Julia isn't adroitly pulling the wool over you, then some individual or group is making a sucker of her, and you are being taken in by their fool's-talk, too. In any event, your joint earnest consideration of her report that inhibitions are a major artistic handicap reminds me of children playing at grown-up conversation about a subject that's over their heads.

In general, great art—whether in painting, writing, singing, acting,—is the outpouring of intense feeling, knowing, awareness, or call it responsiveness to life, that can't be communicated to the artist's satisfaction in ordinary social exchange, simply because he (or she) is extraordinarily sensitive, complex and inhibited; and as a result, the "artistic" medium of expression is forged and utilized.

Inhibitions Are Artist's Hallmark

THUS it's nonsense to say that Julia has "the requisite talent to become a great actress" but is currently stymied by inhibitions. Ardent temperament is the motor power of distinguished creative performance, but without inhibitions, highly individualistic art-forms, such as every great artist leaves as his legacy, never would be developed.

In all probability Julia adds up to a good-looking girl with perhaps an elusive physical resemblance to a famous actress, some elocutionary and imitative talent, and a foggy ambition to achieve wealth and prestige by the handiest glamour-route. Judged by her utterances, she seems to be a comically superficial student of life.

For instance, take her reply to your timid idea that parental complexes might account for her moot inhibition. In effect she says, "I don't think so; because from what I hear, inhibitions are due to environment, not inheritance." As to that, the parent's character—which projects his "complexes"—is the mightiest influence in a child's early environment and the instigator of inhibitions acquired. My advice for Julia is to act her age, be true to herself "as is," and respect her inhibitions for all sorts of reasons. M. H.

About Too-Bright Gold Braid

Attention M. F. B.: Several readers have written in about where to find ice creepers. M. I. B. says they are available at several shoe repair places here. The telephone numbers of two that definitely have them are District 7970 and District 7833. A local department store (District 5300) sells them at its notions counter. Also carrying them are a sports shop, the telephone number for which is Metropolitan 4132, and a hardware store that can be reached by telephoning Lincoln 0905. We have letters, too, from readers who have second-hand creepers for sale or know where they can be ordered from out-of-town firms. If you will send us your name and address, we will forward these letters to you.

Can you tell me how I may tarnish, just slightly, some gold braid so that it will blend with braid on a year-old uniform belonging to a naval officer?
J. C.

During the war, naval officers who craved a "salty" look despite the newness of their uniforms found that applications of salt water would dull the embarrassing shine of their gold braid. Rubbing with rubber bands is another way to tarnish metal and metallic materials.

I have one of the large zipper traveling bags, of the type used mostly by service personnel while on leave, etc. Several of the large zippers have broken. Do you know of any stores that would be able to repair this bag?
D. C.

Several of the large local valet shops can replace or repair zippers of any type. Look at the listings under "Valet Service" in the Yellow Section of the telephone book.

I have two, much-worn, evening bags with Florentine silver frames. I want to have new velvet put in the frames. Can you tell me who does this work?
M. N. P.

One local store that remakes bags of this type can be reached by telephoning District 4454. The job is rather expensive, as you probably realize.

Not long ago, you printed a letter from a reader asking how brushes for use on dentures can be softened. My dentist told me to soften my nylon toothbrush by using warm or hot water instead of cold to brush my teeth. The method works well, and has only a momentary effect on the bristles. I have been using it for two or three years and have not noticed that it does any harm to the brushes.
A. L. G.

Can you tell me me how to remove a white shoe polish from a wine wool rug? We used clear water and a cloth but it seemed to rub the white in. When dry, the spot is soft but white.
L. S. C.

You should be able to get this spot out with one of the "shampoo" type of rug or upholstery cleaners sold in the houseware's sections of department stores. It may take several applications to dissolve and remove it all. There's the chance, too, that once you have shampooed this spot on the rug thoroughly, it will be so clean that it will "show up" whatever soil is on the rest of the rug. A good general cleaning is the only way to overcome this contrast.

Regarding the trip to Texas D. B. wrote you about, I would suggest she buy sterlized disposable bottles to carry along for use in feeding her 5-month-old infant. These bottles, which save the trouble of sterilizing en route, may be purchased in the infant department of the stores or in drug stores.
L. Y.

Not alcohol? Not acetone? What is it one uses to remove lacquer from sliver, please
E. T. W.

Denatured alcohol is used to remove the lacquer.

If the mother who is worrying about her toddler falling on waxed floors will put a piece of ordinary adhesive tape on the sole of each shoe, she will find it provides a "grip" for the baby and she need not worry about him falling.
A. M.

Where can pepsin powder to take the perspiration odor out of clothes be obtained?
L. T.

One long-established Washington drug firm that sells it can be reached by telephoning Republic 7700. (Sorry, L. T., not to answer your other query, but we do not handle beauty questions in this column.)

I would like to refer to one of your previous articles in which a reader asked for a recipe for apple pie the way it is made in France. Here is the recipe I learned in a cooking class in France:

Line the bottom of pie pan with your favorite kind of dough. Peel apples, cut in halves, and core. Slice in fairly thin slices and put on pie in circles, starting from the outer edge and working towards the center, one slice overlapping the previous one, etc. The thinner the slices, the better the pie. Paint edge of crust with egg yolk. Bake in moderate oven until crust is golden yellow and apples are soft. About 15 minutes before end of baking time, pour over apples the following mixture:

1 whole egg
¾ cup milk
3 large spoonsful sugar

The liquid should not cover the apples entirely, but ends of slices should still be visible.

Can you give me a good recipe for baked hubbard squash in the shell or casserole?
A. D. L.

Wash the squash, cut in half, and remove seeds and stringy portions. Place in shallow pan, cut side down, and bake in a moderately hot oven for 35 to 40 minutes. Placing upside down holds the steam in and hastens the baking. At the end of this time, turn the squash over, dot with butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Continue baking until soft. A delicious variation is to sprinkle the squash with brown sugar when the butter is added.

Popular Pudding

Puddings are a popular dessert this time of year. You'll be asked to serve this "Almond Chocolate Pudding" again and again because it combines chocolate and crunchy almonds at their best.

ALMOND CHOCOLATE PUDDING

3 (1-ounce) squares unsweetened chocolate
2½ cups milk
4 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup granulated sugar
1½ cups cold coffee
½ cup sliced, roasted, unblanched almonds

Heat chocolate and milk over hot water to melt chocolate. Combine cornstarch, salt, sugar and cold coffee and stir until smooth. Gradually add to hot milk mixture, stirring constantly. Cook over hot water 20 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from heat and stir in almonds. Chill. Serves 6.

Pro-Rated Fares For Bermuda Flights Planned

Air passengers may soon be able to fly from several cities along the Eastern seaboard to Bermuda by way of New York for the same fare as from New York to Bermuda, the British Overseas Airways Corp. announced yesterday. Stopovers in New York will be permitted.

The company has filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board for percission to pro-rate the fares in cooperation with American Airlines, Eastern Airlines and Northeast Airlines. The pro-rated fares would become effective January 28, officials said.

Cities affected by this arrangement include Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Boston. When the fares become effective, a passenger may travel from any of these cities to New York on the domestic airline and proceed to Bermuda via BOAC. The rule applies to round trips as well as one-way flights.

Monroe Johnson, 32, a laborer, yesterday was ordered held for grand jury action at a coroner's inquest in the death of his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, 32.

Mrs. Johnson was found dead, with her throat slashed, in their basement apartment at 1606 New Jersey ave. nw. Sunday morning. Police arrested Johnson Sunday afternoon. Johnson and his wife had had an argument over money before the fatality, according to police.

Polar Experts to Talk On Arctic Navigation

The problems of navigation in the polar regions will be discussed by a group of Arctic authorities tonight in the Department of Interior Auditorium at 8:15 o'clock.

The meeting, sponsored by the Institute of Navigation, the American Polar Society, the Arctic Institute of North America and the Arctic Institute of Catholic University, will be open to the public.

Goldwyn Studio Interest Sold by Lady Ashley

Hollywood, Jan. 10 (AP).—Samuel Goldwyn and Mary Pickford now are sole owners of the Samuel Goldwyn Studios.

In a transaction completed over the weekend, Goldwyn acquired the interest in the studio held by Sylvia Stanley of Alderly, England, the former Lady Ashley. She had owned it since the death of her late husband, Douglas Fairbanks, sr., in 1939. Miss Pickford also had been married to Fairbanks.

Scrap Steel Price Cut

Philadelphia, Jan. 10 (AP).—The price of number one heavy melting scrap was reduced $2 a ton today by a leading Philadelphia steel scrap dealer. One dealer said he lowered cast iron prices $5 a ton on all grades, but still found business only fair.

D. C. New Car Sales in 1948 Total 28,258

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington new car sales in 1948 set a postwar peak, despite a falloff in the last two months.

Deliveries of new passenger cars totaled 28,258, last year as compared with 26,489 in 1947 and 16,736 in 1947.

Local dealers delivered 2148 cars in December, slightly more than in the previous month but well under the 2344 in the same month of 1947, according to figures supplied by the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

From Detroit come reports of a probable cutback in production during the next three months. One reason is an impending switchover of Chrysler's four car divisions to 1949 models. Another is a continuing pinch in sheet supply.

Kaiser-Frazer's announcement that it is considering a production cut because of Federal Reserve credit restrictions stirred interest in automotive circles. Most other car makers, according to an Associated Press dispatch, reported they felt no substantial backing up of cars among their dealers as a result of the credit rules.

Figures on new car sales in Washington for the past three years follow:

February	1873	2625	2231

RIGGS DIVIDENDS: Directors of Riggs National Bank yesterday declared regular dividends of $3 a share on capital stock for two quarters, President Robert V. Fleming reported yesterday. One is payable January 15 to stock of record January 10 and the other is payable April 15 to stock of record March 31.

PROGRESS: Deposits of the Shirlington Trust Co. in nearby Virginia rose to $2,812,460 as of December 31, 1948, President Joseph Cherner reported yesterday at the stockholders meeting. The bank opened last March 9 with deposits of $321,489. The institution showed gross earnings of $62,497 and net of $20,102 for the 10 months' operations, Cherner said. Outstanding loans at yearend stood at $1,131,039 and $1,51,205 was invested in Government securities.

INVENTORIES UP: Business inventories increased 800 million dollars during November to a new record of 55.3 billion, the Commerce Department reported yesterday. Only about 60 per cent of this increase could be attributed to the seasonal expansion normal for that month, the department said, indicating that slackened sales were a heavy influence in the buildup.

ODD LOTS: Conorada Petroleum Corp. has been formed by Continental Oil Co., Ohio Oil Co. and Amerada Petroleum Corp. to develop oil properties abroad . . . On behalf of 337 railroads, the Association of American Railroads has asked the ICC to approve its system of interchanging freight cars . . . American Iron and Steel Institute estimated that this week's steel output of 1,830,600 tons will be a new record . . . National Petroleum Council members will meet Thursday, starting at 10 a. m., in the South Interior Building here . . . Closing 1948 prices for real estate bonds, as measured by the Amott-Baker index of 200 issues, was $794 for a $1000 bond compared with $792 on November 30 and $783 on December 31, 1947.

WILL SHOW GAIN: Lanston Monotype Machine Co.'s net income for the fiscal year to end February 28 will be slightly in excess of $819,178 or $3.27 a capital share reported for the previous fiscal year, the Wall Street Journal estimated yesterday. A recession in sales, the publication stated, has not been due to cancellations but to deferred shpiments.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Ralph E. Smiley has been named manager of the new Washington office of Booz, Allen and Hamilton, management consultants in the Investment Building . . . Clifford H. Orr, president of the National Association of Life Underwriters, will address the local group at a luncheon meeting January 19 in the Shoreham Hotel . . . Harold J. Vogler has resigned as director of marketing for Day & Day & Zimmerman, Inc., Philadelphia . . . I. Frank Brownson has been appointed manager of major apliances for Westinghouse Electric Appliance Division . . . Al Sherman has been named head of the new Washington sales offices of Telespots, Inc., producers of television film commercials.

ADVICE: Fred Lazarus, jr., president of Federated Department Stores, urged retailers to raise their organized voice to influence national and international affairs for their own interests. "It is selfinterest, in its myriad forms, that makes the wheels go round in our kind of economy. To ignore this reality is really to repudiate the essence of a free country, which is the profit incentive," he told the thirty-eighth annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association in New York.

SURVEY RESULTS: Over-the counter securities are widely held in Washington, but actual figures were lacking until yesterday when the National Association of Securities Dealers released results of a survey. The study showed there are 8297 stockholders in the District of Columbia who own 362 unlisted issues. The local NASD district committee is planning to release quotations for publication once a week on some of the more prominent of these unlisted issues. Among the first to be quoted (on Sundays) in The Washington Post is DuMont Laboratories A stock, which is widely held in this area.

One on the Aisle—

10 Shows Folding At Season's Peak

By Richard L. Coe

BETWEEN LAST SATURDAY and next, ten shows will have closed on Broadway, leaving the heart of the Nation's theater world with 23 attractions at the height of the season.

This, to put it as mildly as possible, it not good. It illustrates more sharply than anything could the wretched position the theater has fallen into. The real estate world of the theater, which has had its part in creating the salary demands of unions and stars alike, is largely at the root of the evil. To discuss the means of bringing the theater back to the balcony-sitters who are its backbone would mean an essay into which at the moment I do not propose to venture.

The closings include two fantastic successes, a year-old revue and a parade of failures.

"Harvey," with Joe E. Brown and Marion Lorne heading the 48th st. company, which opened in 1944, will finally call it a New York run Saturday night.

"Annie Get Your Gun," which opened May 16, 1946, is another hit calling it a run Saturday night, although there is a chance that if receipts zoom by Thursday night the closing notice will be rescinded. The large cast is still wishing that Star Ethel Merman would break her long-held custom against touring and agree to stay with the company for month-long runs in Philadelphia and Boston. Whether she'll do this to keep the company from being out of work is uncertain, for Miss Merman frankly detests travel and doesn't like to leave her children.

Don't Miss "Annie!"

"Annie's" closing means a rush New York trip for this old body. I hate to admit it, but I've never seen Ethel as Annie and I wouldn't dream of missing her. Eighteen years ago (a mere child at the time)! I went to the first matinee of a Gershwin musical, "Girl Crazy," and had the thrill of a lifetime when the then-unknown Ethel shouted her way through "I Got Rhythm." The only Merman I've missed was "Something for the Boys" during the war, and with this week's mortgage out of the way, I'll be coaching to Gotham Saturday morning. Saturday night's performance is sold out already!

"Make Mine Manhattan" lacked just a week of a full year's run when it closed Sunday night, with Bert Lahr taking over the lead comedy spot originally held by Sid Caesar. With Bert as the star, the musical revue now heads for a road tour that will take it through the spring. It'll be along at Ford's, Baltimore, soon.

Near the success class for a while, but still in the red ink as of last Saturday's closing was the intimate revue boasting several topflight sketches and a delightful new performer, Mary McCarthy, "Small Wonder."

"My Romance," the operetta for which Sigmund Romberg did a last minute score replacing one which was used on tour last season, finally gave up the fight, with Anne Jeffreys, Laurence Brooks and Luella Gear heading the large cast.

"The Young and Fair," which broke its run with an interlude just before Christmas, closed after 44 performances by an excellent all-feminine cast headed by Frances Starr.

"Jenny Kissed Me," by Catholic University's Jean Kerr, got in the three-week run whereby its producers are guaranteed motion picture rights. This slight comedy, which should never have tried Broadway, is the sort of thing that's fine for small community theaters and church groups, was helped by Leo G. Carroll as the star and one regrets the embarrassment of its understandable Broadway fiasco.

Britten Opera Closing

"Don't Listen, Ladies," a Parisian import by Sacha Guitry via London, was a quick failure, with virtually no kind words except for its cast.

"Make Way for Lucia," which will close Saturday night, didn't capture the E. F. Benson stories, but it did have the virtue of complete escapism. Isabel Jeans and Cyril Ritchard shared honors with Lucinda Ballard's wonderful costumes and sets.

Next Saturday's closing of Benjamin Britten's opera-like "The Rape of Lucretia" amounts to a production disaster for Producers Sherman and Marjorie Ewing and Giovanni Cardelli. Kitty Carlisle sings evening performances of the lead, Belva Kibler matinees. Certainly one fundamental error in the New York production was the lack of intimacy afforded by the large Ziegfeld Theater.

The case of "Oh, Mr. Meadowbrook," the Ernest Truex comedy, is unsettled. This was supposed to close last week, but an extension was granted and only time will tell.

A few new arrivals are on the way, but the Broadway picture is not rosy, except for about ten plays now selling seats four months in advance.

THE VARIETY CLUB yesterday installed its officers for the new year at a Statler luncheon addressed by Gael Sullivan, executive director of the Theater Owners of America . . . It was a sentimental occasion for Jake Flax, local bigwig for Republic Pictures and a familiar face on Washington's film row for a generation . . . R. Wade Pearson is the new First Assistant Chief Barker, Morton Gerber the Second Assistant Chief Barker . . . Sam Galanty is the new Treasurer and Jerry Adams is property master . . . The board of governors of Tent No. 11 now includes Carter T. Barron, Frank Boucher, George Crouch, J. Edward Fontaine, Nathan D. Golden, Fred S. Kogod, Fred Kelin, Sidney Lust, Leon Makover, C. Glenn Norris and Sam Wheeler . . . Another feature of the luncheon was the presentation of plaques to Chief Barkers of the past six years, Messrs. Boucher, Golden, Fontaine, Kogod, Wheeler and John Allen . . . Have a good term, Jake.

Death of Man Not Attributed To Traffic Injury

The death of Frank Mandress, 82, of 1610 Monroe st. nw., who was injured November 12 in a traffic accident, was caused by a kidney ailment, Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg reported yesterday after an autopsy.

Mandrell had suffered several broken ribs, police said, when he was struck by a Greyhound bus operated by Thomas N. Cockrell of 3906 Utah ave., Brentwood, Md., in the 2600 block of Wisconsin ave. nw.

Mandress was admitted to Garfield Hospital shortly after the accident and was released December 13, police said. On December 29, he was admitted to Gallinger Hospital, where he died early yesterday. Dr. Rosenberg said Gallinger Hospital records showed he had been admitted for treatment of the kidney ailment which ultimately caused his death.

Plunge Fatal To Soldiers' Home Patient, 74

A 74-year-old patient at the Soldiers' Home Hospital apparently leaped to his death yesterday from a second-floor sun porch window.

He was Herbert Huff of St. Petersburg, Fla., who was admitted to the hospital last October. Police said he leaped about 40 feet to a concrete pavement. He was pronounced dead at the scene at 8:15 a. m.

A veteran of the Spanish-American War, Huff later had part of his left leg amputated as the result of an acciden.. Police said they learned from authorities at the Soldiers' Home Hospital that he was to be admitted shortly to St. Elizabeths Hospital.

His wife, Mrs. Clara Huff, resides in St. Petersburg. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said he will issue a certificate of suicide.

Injured Man Dies After 14 Hours in Cell

The death of a prisoner at the Thirteenth Precinct Station Sunday night, 14 hours after he was arrested on a drunk charge, was due to a fractured skull, an autopsy revealed yesterday.

The prisoner was Earl Tutt, alias Earl Tucker, home address not known. Arrested in the 1400 block of U st. nw. at 4:15 a. m., he was found unconscious on the floor of his cell about 7 p. m. and died en route to Freemen's Hospital.

The autopsy showed the man had died of a skull fracture extending from his left temple to the back of his head, according to Deputy Corner Richard M. Rosenberg. The injury could have been caused either by a fall or a blow, the official said. There were no outer marks on head or body, he added.

Police reported that Pvts. Sebrone King and Carlton G. Thomas of the Thirteenth Precinct were patrolling their beat on foot early Sunday when a passerby reported that an apparently intoxicated man was around the corner.

The policemen found Tucker sitting on the steps of a real estate office. His cap was lying several feet away. The steps had a brick railing, with a rounded concrete top, on both sides, the policemen said.

King and Thomas reported that Tucker walked unassisted to the patrol wagon. They said there was a strong odor of alcohol on the prisoner's breath, but they noted no injuries. He was conscious, although he spoke somewhat incoherently, but he did not mention being struck or falling, the officers added.

Too Sick to Work, But Well Enough to Gripe

No-Solid-Foods, D. C.—There is a sinister conspiracy afoot here.

Every three hours somebody pops a thermometer and some pills in my mouth, but nobody will tell me why.

The thermometer tastes vaguely of alcohol, but there's no nourishment in it. The pills are supposed to be sulpha and penicillin and such, but I suspect that they're appetite-stimulating vitamin B instead.

I've never been so hungry in my life. The diet they give an "invalid" these days is enough to make a healthy man sick. Anybody who can survive it is pronounced cured.

Twenty years ago my malady would have been known as a cold. I'd have broken it in 24 hours with a big jug of hot tea flavored with a hooker of rye.

I understand that the custom of coming down with a common cold is still prevalent to this day, among the lower-income groups.

However, the country club set never gets anything less than Virus X. Those who can afford it catch even fancier diseases.

In any event the medical profession seems obsessed with the idea that the only way to save the patient is to starve him to death.

I'm going to try to make a break for freedom this morning. If I get over the wall okay I'll do my radio program at 10 o'clock.

I think I'm strong enough for the program to be resumed. The only thing that worries me is, are you?

SYSTEM

Harold Hughes of 1324 Fort Stevens dr. nw. wonders whether I answer all my mail. Unfortunately, I don't. It works like this:

Letters which are used in the column, ordinarily do not require an answer. But common courtesy indicates that the others should be acknowledged if possible.

So first I write the column; then I try to answer all the letters that weren't used. If the hour is late, I don't finish the job. The unanswered letters go into the center drawer of my desk.

Saturday and Sunday are peachy days for correspondence, and I always make a good dent in the pile. But each Monday morning the drawer is a bit fuller than it was a week before.

When the battle has gone against me for so long that I can no longer open and close the drawer freely, it's time for desperate measures. I grit my teeth and file away all the unanswered correspondence.

Then I can start with an empty drawer—and a reasonably clear conscience.

Answering letters may be a chore to some, but it's a real pleasure to me. Whenever I'm faced with a big stack of correspondence I think of my favorite ("no solid foods") doctor.

His waiting room is always jammed to capacity, and that means he must go through his day at a dog trot in order to attend to all the people who need his services.

One day as he placed his tongue depressor half-way down my throat and peered thoughtfully into my stomach he mused:

"Gad, where do all those people come from? How am I ever going to treat them all before I leave for my hospital rounds?"

When the wooden spatula had been removed, and I had regained the use of my voice, I chided, "Aw, if the waiting room were empty you'd complain about that too."

Doc sat bolt upright and blinked. With the air of a man who had just made a great discovery, he exclaimed:

"That would be even worse, wouldn't it?"

GIVE-AWAYS

"Male police dog, 1 year old, very affectionate." (McLean, Va., Elmwood 300).

"Small, cute, 10-week-old Spitz pup." (Adams 0428).

"Bob-tailed gray tiger kitten, four months old." (Metropolitan 1525).

PERSONAL NOTES

Virginia Benson, 5613 N. 19th st., Arlington, Va.: If your husband got "a new driver's license without taking a test" in the District, he's just teasing you.

He had his old one renewed before it expired; and for that he needs only an application blank and three bucks.

If he had permitted his old license to lapse for six months, he'd have had to pass a written test before getting a new one. After a delay of a year, applicants must pass both written and road tests.

However, if this is a Virginia license you're referring to, then I'm as stumped as you are, because I'm not familiar with the Virginia regulations.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

David W. Harker of 1308 New Hampshire ave. nw. wonders why it is that we can't make up our minds about letting the ladies take precedence.

In the phrase "Ladies and gentlemen," the gals are first. But then we confuse things by writing, "Mr. and Mrs."

CRIME DOESN'T PAY

Mrs. Luella M. Moyer of 4211 8th st. nw. makes my sniffles easier to bear by forwarding a clipping about a local holdup. In part, it stated:

"The swarthy thug was described as wearing a tan topcoat, about 28 years old . . ."

No wonder the poor devil was driven to a life of crime.

THIS YEAR'S COATS

Oh, I like the sweep of a flare that's deep
When she walks with a regal air.
But a coat so complete on a streetcar seat
Should call for an extra fare.

NEW YORK.—Barney Ross, the former fight champ and Marine Corps hero, will enter St. Albans Hospital tomorrow. He's suffering from bleeding ulcers.

Sam Goldwyn, who just fired Theresa Wright, is spending $300,000 in advertising a still-photo of her, in "Enchantment." It will appear in all magazines and in front of 10,000 theaters . . . The successful fight against bringing William Furtwaengler, the German conductor, to Chicago this year, was engineered by Ira Hirschmann, author of "The Embers Still Burn" and former member of the War Refugee Board, who checked on Furtwaengler's activities in Nazi Germany.

* * * *

Richard Haydn, the film actor-director, said of an eminent producer: "What a personality that man needs" . . . At the Capitol Theater, for the first time in vaudeville history, an acrobatic act closes the show. The acrobats are Burt Lancaster and his former circus partner, Nick Cravat . . . Francois Mauriac, the French playwright, opened his newest play recently and on opening night it was obvious that the play flopped. Henri Bernstein, the rival playwright, came backstage after the opening, and sought for words which wouldn't be embarrassing. He finally said: "Are you happy?" and Mauriac replied: "Not as much as you are."

* * * *

The first-night of "Jezebel," the Broadway play which starred Miriam Hopkins, was attended by Donald Ogden Stewart, who, at the end of the second act, was so positive that it was a flop that he bet a friend a case of champagne that the play wouldn't run two weeks. Word of this champagne-bet reached Miss Hopkins, and when Stewart came to her dressing room to congratulate her, she berated him for having made it. He apologized, assured her it was a hit—but Miss Hopkins continued to berate him. This exasperated Stewart, so that when there was a knock at the door and Miss Hopkins asked: "Who is that?", Stewart suggested: "It's the man with the champagne."

Anderson Key to Farm Program

By Drew Pearson

The man President Truman is counting upon to put over his farm program in the Senate sits at the tail of the Agriculture Committee, not at the head. He is former Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson, now Senator from New Mexico, who is low-man-on-the-totem-pole under the Senate's seniority system.

Anderson

But the President has far more confidence in his former Cabinet officer than in the Agriculture Committee's speculating chairman, Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma.

Yet the amazing fact is, Anderson almost didn't get on the Agriculture Committee—in spite of the fact he was once Secretary of Agriculture. Under the seniority system, Iowa's incoming Senator Guy Gillette was entitled to a place ahead of Anderson because he had served on the Agriculture Committee during his previous term in the Senate. The only other two vacancies were claimed by Senators with higher seniority—South Carolina's Olin Johnston and Mississippi's James Eastland.

The Democratic Steering Committee, however, ruled that Eastland, who had been an out-and-out Dixiecrat, would have to forfeit his seniority in this case. Johnston also had opposed President Truman in the primaries but had ended up on the Truman bandwagon. Johnston also comes up for election in 1950, and his opponent is certain to be the chief Dixiecrat of them all—J. Strom Thurmond. So the committee gave out the three agriculture seats to Johnston, Gillette and Anderson.

Merci Train

The French Merci Train, in thanks for the Friendship Train, is now being loaded at the port of Le Havre onto the SS Magellan en route to the United States. Here is the description of the train's departure from Paris as given by Leon Pearson over NBC:

"A freight train of 49 cars loaded with the hearts of a million Frenchmen pulled out of Paris this morning bound for Le Havre and New York. Before its journey is ended that train will have reached every State in the United States and its spirit will have touched the entire country—49 cars, one for each State plus the District of Columbia.

"I walked the whole length of that train this morning before the ceremonies and the speechmaking began and marveled at the way the French railway workers who are principally responsible for this gratitude train have repainted and decorated those old boxcars that every American doughboy knew so well.

"The railroad cars are packed even tighter than when they carried 8 horses or 40 soldiers to the battlefields of Chateau-Thierry and Belleau Wood. They are packed with paintings of the old masters, with sculpture and with historic documents. They are packed with elegant gowns made by the French designers of fashion, with fancy work and lace and embroidery, with hand-painted china and procelain and with thousands of dolls from the children of France to the children of the United States.

"More than 50,000 different objects—the gifts of a million Frenchmen, ranging from the President of the French Republic down to the poor little girl whose doll didn't have any hair, so she cut off some of her own to make her gift presentable for the gratitude train. The train is due in Le Havre this evening, where the cars—for the cars as well as the contents are a gift—will be loaded on the SS Magellan for New York."

Labor Friend Irked

Now that the Democrats are running things on Capitol Hill, organized labor should be careful not to antagonize the public the way the National Association of Manufacturers did in the Eightieth Congress.

The American people are quick to resent strong-arm tactics by any group and one prolabor Senator, Utah's deep-thinking Elbert Thomas, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, is already resentful.

What burned Thomas up was an attempt by his labor friends to dictate membership on his committee. When labor lobbyists went so far as to tell Thomas whom to hire and fire on his staff, Thomas, usually a gentle Utahan, got his dander up.

Thomas wanted to keep Senator Irving Ives, New York Republican, on his committee to give the new labor program a bipartisan approach. It was Ives, when the Taft-Hartley bill first came up, who helped Thomas override it inside the committee, and forced Taft to carry the fight to the Senate floor. In the end, Ives voted for the Taft-Hartley Act, so labor last week objected to keeping him on the Labor Committee. Other Democrats sided with labor and Thomas was overruled. Ives retired.

However, Thomas put his foot down when labor friends tried to stack his committee staff. No Senator has been a better friend to labor than the Senator from Utah, so he decided he could be trusted to employ a fair staff.

Real Estate Lobby

The real estate lobby will fire its first salvo of the new year on Wednesday when it plays host to some 200 Congressmen. The affair is slated to be held in the Presidential Room of Washington's Hotel Statler and is officially labeled as purely social. The lobby's real purpose, however, is to meet the new Congressmen and to lay the groundwork for selling them on the "evils" of rent control and public housing.

Taft Eyed Post

Significantly, the Republican who protested loudest backstage over the Democrats increasing their majority on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was Senator Taft.

When he got the news that the Democrats had decided to absorb the vacancy by increasing their own majority eight to five, Taft stormed over to Democratic National Chairman Howard McGrath.

"The boys don't like this," exploded the forthright Senator from Ohio.

Old Things

I like old houses and old streets . . . The tree that shows its age . . . And that familiar color of . . . The fading printed page . . . I like old shoes and battered hats . . . The wrinkles in a brow . . . And fields that have not felt for years . . . The turning of a plow . . . Each month and moon of long ago . . . And every smile and tear . . . Become the music of a song . . . That leaves a souvenir . . . The world goes on from day to day . . . With love and flowers fair . . . And many are the hands that reach . . . For newness everywhere . . . But in my heart I treasure all . . . The things that used to be . . . And I am really happy when . . . I dream in memory.
